Mississippi lawmakers try to trim fat

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

Three Mississippi legislators have introduced a bill that would make it illegal for restaurants to serve obese customers, USA Today reported.

"Any food establishment to which this section applies shall not be allowed to serve food to any person who is obese," the bill reads in part.

The State Department of Health would be responsible for determining the obesity benchmark and for enforcing the law.

Under the proposal, health inspectors would be allowed to take away the permit from any restaurant that repeatedly feeds extremely overweight customers.

About two-thirds of Mississippians are overweight or obese, according to a recent analysis of federal health data.

NOTED. A New Jersey State Police employee is accused of sneaking into a church to look at pornography on a nun's computer.

Police said Thomas G. Findler had been repeatedly sneaking into Grace St. Paul Episcopal Church in the night over the last three weeks. A church custodian found Findler, who worships at the church, with porn on a nun's computer. Findler was charged with burglary and theft.

QUOTED. "This incident arose from a breach of what I understand to be urinal etiquette."

— Defense attorney Liz Bulger, defending a New Zealand man accused of punching another man in the face twice in a bar bathroom, the New Zealand Post reported.

When Edward Aldridge used a urinal, the man beside him reportedly kept looking at him. He was sentenced to 50 hours of community service.

Expert tips: applying to graduate

As seniors are counting down their last 97 days in school, they are entering crunch time for graduation requirements.

Amid plans for internships, jobs, graduate school and living situations, graduating seniors need to remember to apply to graduate to be sure they get to their post-college plans.

So before donning their caps and gowns, seniors should heed these tips from academic advising:

■ Apply early. Friday is the deadline for students in the College of Arts and Sciences. Failure to turn in your application could result in problems with your graduation.

■ Remember your course numbers. The hardest part of the application is listing and remembering all of your course numbers, advisers say.

■ Take care of transfer credits. If you have credits from study abroad or other colleges and universities that have not shown up on your record, send your transcripts with your application.

■ Meet with your adviser. If you haven't met with your adviser to ensure that you are taking the right classes, schedule an appointment with senior advisers immediately.

■ Check with your professional school. Seniors in the professional schools should talk to their advisers about the school's specific deadlines and requirements.
