Oompa loompa doopity doo ... oops

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

A Louisiana woman who was house-sitting and had a 6-month-old baby with her told a man she met on Craigslist he could come over but only to sleep. He arrived in a purple top hat, a large purple cape and a purple satin shirt, police spokesman Lt. Jack West said. His upper body was covered in pink body paint and glitter, West told the Times-Picayune.

West said the officer on the scene told him, "I opened the door, and this Oompa Loompa is standing there," referring to the well-known characters from "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory."

Police later searched the man's car and discovered the trunk was packed with hay, two hula hoops and a whip, West said.

NOTED. Police searching a Washington, D.C., home found a man hiding 15 plastic bags of crack cocaine in his buttocks.

Pierre Lynch, 20, was searched and charged with possession with the intent to distribute crack cocaine, possession of crack cocaine, possession of drug paraphernalia, obstructing and hindering and making a false statement to police officers.

QUOTED. "Some of the sisters down here are 80 to 90 years old, and they are football addicts. So when the Giants made the Super Bowl, one of them said to me, 'We can't let Eli down. We have to get Our Lady in on this.'"

— Sister Kathleen Finnerty, superintendent of schools for the Archdiocese of New Orleans, who sent team president John Mara a medallion of the Blessed Virgin, the Times-Picayune reported.

CELEBRATING HINTON JAMES

DTH/ANKIT GUPTA

Junior Frank Sturges walks around the Pit dressed as Hinton James to commemorate Hinton James Day on Tuesday. Hinton James supposedly walked from his hometown of Wilmington, about 90 miles from Chapel Hill, to be the first enrolled student at the University in 1795.
