Just another day in a drunken life

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

A 50-year-old Florida man known for public intoxication was arrested at a Waffle House when the man began to change clothes in the middle of the restaurant. After an employee asked the man to change in the bathroom, the man began beating on the windows and cursing loudly, employees said.

When the officer asked the man what the problem was, the man replied, "I'm drunk. You know how I am when I'm drunk." The man was booked for disorderly intoxication and trespassing.

NOTED. Manatee County, Fla., sheriff's department officers were forced to Tase a naked man seen wandering through a neighbor's backyard, deputies say.

The family called for help when they spotted 65-year-old Duncan Kirk in their backyard, and then sitting on their screened porch.

QUOTED. "We haven't got any Crocodile Dundees on the task force."

— Supervisory deputy U.S. marshal William Taylor, after officers tracking a drug dealer in Ohio came across two alligators guarding the back door. Luckily, a nearby suburban police officer moonlighted as an exotic animal wrangler.

"Bottom line: Game day should be an experience. You get there early. You stay the entire game, cheering on the Tar Heels. You can feel the energy in the Dean Dome, and when people leave, it's truly a downer. I make it a rule never leave until after we have sung the alma mater. Maybe some of these high-and-mighty alum should follow the same rule."
