Best male athlete

Winner: Tyler Hansbrough

Garnering about 90 percent of the vote here, Hansbrough wins the award for the second year in a row. Too much to hope for that he could win it a third time next year? That would probably mean missing out on the national championship this year, which frankly would not be worth it, even as much as CF loves Tyler.

Most underrated athlete

Winner: Quentin Thomas

QQQQQQQQQQ Can you be underrated two years in a row? The 6'3" junior guard from Oakland has improved each season despite injuries and up and down playing time and has blossomed while starting the second half of the ACC season with Ty Lawson out. As CF predicted last year at this time, Q has played a major role in getting the Tar Heels this far, so far. Yea us.
