DAILY DOSE

Officer saves man from flaming bed

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

A Kansas City, Kan., police sergeant saved a driver's life overnight when he stopped a car dragging a mattress on fire down Seventh Street. About 3:30 a.m., the officer said he saw a station wagon dragging a mattress engulfed in flames. He used the squad car's loud speaker to try to get the driver's attention, but the driver didn't initially stop.

The car finally stopped near North Seventh Street and Stewart Avenue, just before the car burst into flames.

Police said the fire started after the car drove over a mattress, which got caught on the underside of the car. The springs inside the mattress started sparking from friction with the pavement, sparking a massive engine fire.

NOTED. A police officer went to the home of a Washington man who had filed a complaint about a neighbor's cat and smelled marijuana.

A drug task force returned with a search warrant last weekend and found 84 plants in a raid on the man's home.

Police Chief Carrie Green said the man has now learned to be careful what he complains about.

QUOTED. "The custom here is for dead people to be dressed in suits, in nice clothes that look presentable. This guy was in everyday clothes that were wrinkled and dirty."

— A Madrid, Spain, police official after discovering a burglar inside a funeral home lying on a table in a glassed-in chamber used for viewings of deceased people during wakes.

The parlor said there is no cash kept on site.
