first 45 minutes didn't hold up. It was then that the vaunted UVa. attack solved UNC goal keeper Grant Zimmerman, and the stingy Tar Heel defense began to crumble.

The Tar Heels were out-shot 19-5 in the fourth quarter, part of a 56-33 margin for the game

But until the last three minutes, UNC always had an answer for every Cavalier push.

With five minutes to go, both teams took part in a 74-second scoring spree, and each notched two goals, including a behind-the-back beauty lobbed past Zimmerman by UVa.'s Garrett Billings to help start things off.

Then the Cavaliers (10-1, 1-1) scored three unanswered, the final by Danny Glading with 17 seconds left to take it into overtime. With 1:01 left in the suddendeath extra period, Steve Giannone lobbed the rebound of a saved shot that bounced out of Zimmerman's

Both keepers were forces in the game, with Zimmerman recording 14 saves and UVa.'s Bud Petit, in his first start since 2005, nabbing 13.

"He's good. Wow," Petit said of his goalkeeping counterpart. "I think we shot to his strengths early, which was frustrating to me at the other end.

"I knew both teams were going to start getting some goals on each goalie, but hats off to him 'cause he kept them in it."

There wasn't much more success at the plate for the Tar Heels, either. UNC scored just one run and had as many strikeouts - six - as hits.

But the series' last game was the exception rather than the rule. In the opener Friday, North Carolina leadoff Dustin Ackley homer and a five-run sixth to demolish Georgia Tech, 8-1.

While UNC was steadily building a comfortable lead - the Tar Heels put ones on the board in each of the first three innings — starting pitcher Alex White was more than holding his own against the Jackets.

White pitched seven innings, shutting out the Ramblin' Wreck and striking out two more Yellow Jackets than he allowed on base.

"Just seeing Sanaz keep fighting back, knowing she lost the first set we were out there together help-ing each other out," she said.

UNC coach Brian Kalbas said he was proud of the way Marand adjusted her game to defeat an athletic opponent who previously had given her problems.

"She needed to know that she wasn't going to win every point even if she did everything correctly, because this girl was very com-petitive, very athletic and moved extremely well," Kalbas said.

"Last year this girl really frustrated Sanaz, and Sanaz broke down tactically and mentally. This year, I think, Sanaz got stronger as the match went on."
The Demon Deacons (8-9, 4-4) forfeit matches at No. 1 doubles and No. 6 singles, putting them at a significant disadvantage in the already difficult match ahead of them.

Poske was slated to play at No. 3 ngles, so the Wake Forest players at positions 4, 5 and 6 each moved up a position.

After seeing the fight with which they came out, Kalbas said the Demon Deacons used the injury as a spark for the rest of the match.

For Wake, when the girl got injured in doubles and they had to default at number six singles, they came out with nothing to lose."
