DAILY DOSE
Woman to sell Obama's Jeep on eBay

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

A 45-year-old Illinois woman learned that her Jeep Grand Cherokee was once owned by presidential candidate Barack Obama during his final four years as Illinois state senator. The woman plans to sell the vehicle on eBay after the November election, and she is hoping to get three or four times the estimated trade-in value of the Jeep if Obama wins the election.

When the woman test-drove the Jeep four years ago, she noticed a heavily worn spot on the wheel, indicating that Obama gripped the steering wheel with his left hand slightly to the left of 12 o'clock. Obama bought the Jeep new in 2000 and later sold it to a Dodge dealership in Forest Park, Ill.

NOTED. A 9-year-old boy from Ottawa, Canada, was arrested for holding up a restaurant with a toy gun.

Police are investigating the robbery because it is unclear if the boy was playing or not. Nothing was taken from the restaurant, and no one was injured. A manager at the take-out restaurant attributed the incident to "just kids."

QUOTED. "Are you kidding, I loved it. It gave me chills."

— Ashley, a waitress at a Denver Hooters, on watching Sen. Hillary Clinton's Democratic National Convention speech while serving Newsweek's Jonathan Darman and four other journalists. The journalists had gone to the Hooters to "watch Hillary's big convention speech among her people."

POLICE LOG

■ There were at least six incidents of breaking and entering reported Tuesday morning on Village Crossing Drive, according to Chapel Hill police reports.

All six incidents involved a suspect breaking a car window, and in all but one a suspect stole electronics from the car, the reports state.

A total of $2,407 worth of electronics were stolen from the cars, including five GPS units, an MP3 player and an iPod, according to the reports.

A total of $1,700 of damage to the cars was reported.

■ Someone broke into a vehicle at 105 Carriage Circle and stole $10,000 in cash Tuesday, according to Chapel Hill police reports.

The passenger side window in the car, a 2008 Suzuki, was broken and a bank deposit bag with the money was removed, reports state.

■ Someone stole a catalytic converter from a car Tuesday afternoon, Chapel Hill police reports state.

The catalytic converter, valued at $200, was taken from the bottom of a 2002 Toyota Sequoia, according to reports.

The car was located in enclosed parking at 1414 Raleigh Road, reports state.

■ Carrboro police received a report of assault with a deadly weapon Tuesday, according to Carrboro police reports.

The victim had a one-inch cut in his forehead after he was hit with a brick during an argument, reports state.

■ A Chapel Hill man was arrested Tuesday on misdemeanor counts of displaying a fictitious tag and driving with a revoked or suspended license.

Justin Roy Jacobs, 27, of 328 Azalea Drive, was released on a written promise to appear in court Oct. 7.
