

Back in the swing of things

BY DANIEL PRICE
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

After weeks of practice in anticipation of defending its 2007 national title, the North Carolina field hockey team got a shot in the arm Saturday.

Teammates welcomed back former midfielder/forward Jesse Gey, who is serving as an undergraduate assistant this season, and midfielder Katelyn Falgowski. Both arrived home from Beijing with Team USA.

But even since returning this past weekend, Falgowski and Gey have been absent from pre-season practices.

They're not injured or sick. Their absences come on orders from 2007 National Coach of the Year Karen Shelton, who wanted Gey and Falgowski to have time to readjust to campus life — and Eastern Standard Time.

"They have to be exhausted," Shelton said. "That 12-hour time difference is a real hurdle, and it takes two weeks to really recover." But the two members of 2007's All-America teams, who accounted for more than half of the team's assists last year, don't have two weeks to adjust. The season-opener is Saturday against No. 9 Michigan, the Tar Heels' first game of the ACC-Big Ten Challenge.

Shelton hopes Falgowski will be able to go at full speed, but the second-year player said the transition from Beijing hasn't been easy.

"Definitely I went through an adjustment period, a little jet lag and stuff," Falgowski said, adding, "I've been playing hockey for the last eight months, and when you have a week off, it feels like you haven't played in months."

If the Tar Heels are to earn back-to-back national titles for the second time in school history, Falgowski will prove vital.

The Landenberg, Pa.-native is UNC's leading returning scorer after she racked up 39 points on nine goals and a team-best 21 assists in 2007. The only two Tar Heels to outscore Falgowski were Gey and Honda Award-winner Rachel Dawson, each of whom tallied 44 points.

While Gey no longer sports the Carolina blue No. 15 on game days, that won't stop her from getting out on the field at Henry Stadium during practice.

"She's going to be out here, still training," Shelton said. "She's got a long international future in front of her."

"This is a good environment, one that's safe for her, but she can still give back to the program at the same time."

And though Gey is ultimately working toward an appearance in London in 2012, roaming the sidelines for another team after this season is not out of the question.

"That's one of the reasons I wanted to coach, to see if I was any good at it," she said. "I think I will (like it)."

"With two games against top-10 opponents this weekend, Gey, Falgowski and the rest of the UNC squad will have to prove they deserve their preseason No. 1 ranking. But Shelton, who knows a thing or two about coaching against top-10 teams, said Michigan and fifth-ranked Iowa are not her team's focus.

"This weekend is not really about the opposition and who we're playing," she said. "It's about us."
