The Carolina Farm Stewardship Association held its third annual Eastern Triangle Farm Tour on Saturday, showcasing farms in the Triangle area.

The goal of the association is to show how local agriculture is good for the consumer, good for the farmer and good for the land.

A rooster looks out from his coop at Edible Earthscape Farm in Moncure. The farm also produces 700 gallons of biodiesel a week made of refined oil collected from local colleges, high schools and businesses.

Echinacea flowers serve as a food source for a honeybees, whose population has declined during the past year. Edible Earthscape Farm sells their flowers every Saturday morning at North Hills mall in Raleigh.

Wool produced from rare breeds of sheep on the Dew Dance Farm in Moncure is used to knit baby booties. There are four breeds of sheep used for the wool.

Jalapeno peppers, eggplants and okra are some of the produce grown at the family-run, 26-acre Dew Dance Farm in Moncure.

Men's soccer tightens defense after rout

BY CHRIS HEMPSON
STAFF WRITER

The North Carolina men's soccer team learned firsthand this weekend that the ball doesn't always bounce in its favor.

Following a 4-1 beatdown of Liberty last Tuesday, the squad headed to Boston College on Friday with an undefeated record.

Again, UNC's game ended in a 4-1 decision. But this time the Tar Heels (5-1-1, 1-1 ACC) were the ones humbled in a lopsided loss.

Junior Eddie Ababio prevented a scoreless effort, netting the team's lone goal on a collective nine shots.

But one defeat doesn't define or damper a season, as coach Elmar Bolowich well knows.

"Sometimes you have games where the other team shoots and whatever they shoot goes in," he said.

"It was just one of those nights where everything seemed to work for them and nothing seemed to work for us."

Bolowich did note several facets of the game he would like changed.

For one, the fact that for the second conference game in a row, the Tar Heels faced a 1-0 deficit at the half. And further, both opponents' first goals came with less than 10 minutes remaining in the half.

Though formations and defensive alignments can be mixed and changed to accommodate the opposition, these recurring morale killers could be a cause for concern

Forward Eddie Ababio leads the team with five goals this year. No other UNC player has more than two.

for a team looking to compete for the conference title this year.

"You have to establish yourself in a game, and you cannot be outworked by your opponent," Bolowich said.

"We need to start taking the initiative and battling for dominance."

With four home games coming up on the schedule, the Tar Heels will have plenty of chances to work on faster starts. Bolowich said the team will use practices to fine-tune those loose ends.

One of the main focuses will be playing better defense. Lately UNC has allowed opposing teams too much space to operate within, Bolowich said.

Instead of being ready to anticipate, he thinks the team is constantly in reaction mode.

"I would like to see more aggressiveness from our team," Bolowich said. "These are things that we have to reiterate."
