Zeta-Jones set to play Cleopatra in film

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

Catherine Zeta-Jones, 39, has been tapped to play famed Egyptian Queen Cleopatra in a new Steven Soderbergh flick. Her husband, Michael Douglas, is set to have a cameo as a mummy.

The film is planned to be a 3-D live action rock musical and will cost $30 million to produce. It will chronicle the queen's life and her love affair with legendary Roman politician Marc Antony, which results in her suicide after she and Antony are defeated by Emperor Julius Caesar.

The movie will be the first with Zeta-Jones as lead since her Oscar-winning performance as Velma Kelly in 2002's "Chicago." Soderbergh is hoping to get Hugh Jackman, of "X-Men" fame, to portray Zeta-Jones' love interest.

NOTED. Egyptian police have busted a Cairo civil servant and his wife, a teacher, for hosting swinger parties.

The couple arranged their wife-swapping sessions on the Internet, according to security officers. Sex out of wedlock is illegal in Egypt. Authorities are investigating other couples who may have been involved in the swinger parties.

QUOTED. "Actually, this is a J. Crew ensemble ... You can get some good stuff online."

— Michelle Obama to comedian Jay Leno on Monday on NBC's "The Tonight Show." She wore a yellow sweater, skirt and blouse ensemble. She said that she and Barack have a policy of spending their own money on their clothes. When asked directly about Sarah Palin's $150,000 shopping spree, Michelle Obama refused to criticize.
