DAILY DOSE

Fake front news pages in Chapel Hill

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

An anarchist group distributed a spoof newspaper that resembled the USA Today to replace The (Raleigh) News & Observer in several newspaper boxes Wednesday.

"Capitalism Wins at the Polls," read the lead headline above a photo of a bonfire.

The anarchist group said it distributed 30,000 copies in at least 10 cities, including Chapel Hill and Carrboro. In an e-mail to the N&O, they explained their reasoning.

"That one wealthy politician will replace another is not news. Capitalism has always won at the polls, and it always will."

NOTED. After a rabid fox attacked a jogger in Arizona, she continued to run a mile with the fox locked onto her arm.

The woman didn't knock the fox off because she wanted to bring it to the hospital with her and get it tested for rabies. When she got to her car, she pried it off and stuck it in her trunk.

Later, the fox bit an animal control officer. Both victims will be treated for rabies.

QUOTED. "The kids could have OD'd on it." — Shelly Brosdahl, who found about $200 worth of meth in her 7-year-old's Halloween candy bag.

The crystals looked like rock candy, the parents said.

"He said some bigger kid ran by him and asked if he wanted some candy," Lars Brosdahl said. "He said 'Sure,' and the kid dropped it into his bag."
