DAILY DOSE

Wait, she got tickets?

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS
Actress Ashley Judd, infamous in Chapel Hill for her devotion to the Kentucky Wildcats, will sit in the UNC student section during today's men's basketball game.

While campaigning for Barack Obama last month, Judd promised students she would return to UNC for the game if North Carolina went blue Election Day. "We are not here to talk about what divides us but what unites us," Judd said at the Oct. 30 rally.

NOTED. So this guy walked into a bar with an alligator... But it wasn't a joke.

In Huntington Beach, Calif., a man dragged his 3-foot pet alligator into a bar on a leash. By the time animal control officers arrived, the gator was in the man's vehicle. He had another at home. Alligators are not legal in California, and the case is pending investigation.

NOTED. A Wisconsin man has amassed a ball of twine about as tall as he is.

He started it on April 3, 1979.

He weighs the twine as he adds it, and he estimates the ball weighs just less than 20,000 pounds.

The man has easy access to twine material — he's worked at a dump for 30 years.
