DAILY DOSE
Local recruiting kissers

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

An ad on craigslist asks for females for a kissing research study in Durham, and says the study is a follow-up to a 2000 research study by UNC School of Public Health faculty. The ad says subjects will be filmed kissing and heavy petting, and will be paid $100.

But professor Carolyn Halpern said in an e-mail today that she didn't know about the ad and that it has no relation to any study her team is doing.

NOTED. According to a Europe-wide study by the Condom Consultancy in Germany, the French need the largest condoms.

The Consultancy asked 10,500 men in 25 countries to measure their penis and enter the number into a database. Frenchmen averaged 6.09 inches, which is 3 cm longer than Greeks, who were smallest.

NOTED. To support your favorite baseball team, you can typically buy a hat or a sweat-shirt or maybe one of those foam No. 1 hands.

But if you're a Red Sox fan, you can buy a casket, too.

A Massachusetts funeral home recently took delivery of the first $3,000 Red Sox casket, which features the team logo on the exterior and the inside.

POLICE LOG

- Police charged a man with two felonies after he broke into a residence on Cameron Court, according to Chapel Hill police reports.
- Robert Allen Merritt, 48, took $285 in jewelry, purses and alarm speaker caps before he was arrested Thursday, reports state.
- Merritt, of 100 W. Rosemary St., faces felony charges of breaking and entering and larceny, in addition to a misdemeanor count of resisting arrest, according to reports.
- Merritt was taken to the Orange County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond and was expected in court Monday, reports state.
- A Carrboro man was arrested Sunday for assault by strangulation and resisting a public officer, according to Chapel Hill police reports.
- Police released Corey Edward Ingram, 27, in lieu of $8,000 bond. He was expected in court Monday.
- Police responded to reports of gunshots in the area of East Main and Weaver streets Friday, according to Carrboro police reports.
- An off-duty Chapel Hill police officer saw someone in a dark Mitsubishi fire the shots, reports state, but was unable to follow the vehicle.
- According to reports, officers shortly after responded to a disturbance and identified the subjects as being in the shot vehicle.
- Reports state that the man who drove the vehicle told police he was not going to report the incident because he felt it wasn't important.
- Police found a handgun on a man after an officer unsuccessfully Tased him, according to Carrboro police reports.
- Police were responding to reports of a disturbance on Davie Road when they saw Anthony Alexander Riggsbee, 44, throwing items into the front yard, reports state.
- Police gave several verbal commands to lay down and then yelled, "Taser, Taser, Taser" and deployed the electronic device, reports state.
- The officer came closer and noticed that the probes of the device were stuck to Riggsbee's jacket, reports state. The officer then performed a "drive stun," handcuffed Riggsbee and found a pistol in his pocket, reports state.
