SUNDAY READING.

THE TWO ANGELS.

BY R. W. LONGFELLOW. Two angels, one of Life and one of Dentis, Passed o'er our village as the morning broke; The dawn was on their faces and beneath,

The sombre houses hearsed with plumes of smoke. Their attitude and aspect were the same, Alike their features and their robes of white; But one was crowned with amaranth, as with flame,

And one with asphodels, like flances of light. I saw them pause on their celestral way : Then said I, with deep fear and doubt oppressed,

Bent not so loud, my heart, lest then betray The place where thy beloved me at rest? And he who were the crown of asphodels, Descending at a y door, began to knock,

And my soul sank wit fin me, as in wells The waters sink before an earthquake's shock. I recognized the nameless agony,

The terror and the tremor and the pain, That oit before had filled or haunted me, And now returned with three-fold strength again. The door I opened to my heavenly guest,

And listened for I thought I heard God's voice; And, knowing what seeler He sent was best, Dared neither to lament nor to rejoice. Then with a strike that filled the house with light,

"My errand is not Death, but Life," he said ; Bud ere I answered, passing out of sight, On his celestial embassy he sped. 'Twas at thy door, O friend! and not at mine,

The angel with the am crantoine wreath, Pausing, descended, and with a voice divine Whispered a word that had a sound like Death. Then fell upon the house a sudden gleom,

A shadow on those features fair and thin: And sofily from the hushed and darkened room, Two angels issued where but one went in. All is of God! If He but wave his hand,

The mists collect, the rain falls thick and loud, Till, with a smile of light on sea and land, Lo! He looks back from the departing cloud. Angels of Life and Death alike are his; Without his leave they pass no threshhold o'er;

Who, then, would wish, or dare, disbelieving this, Against His messengers to shut-the door? SIDNEY SMITH ON SUNDAY OBSERVANCE .-The eccentric and satyrical Sydney Smith was never charged with being unco-righteous. But there are veigns of deep and noble thought in his papers, which it were well if some who are quite ready to command his wit and laxity of opinion on a few subjects, would resort to. Take the fol-

The lant lifts up its head in freshened greenness to he morning light; so the mother's soul gathers, from the dark sorrow which she has passed, a brightening of her heavenly hopes.
