NEWBERN, N. C.,

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 27, 1859.

Peace Declared ... Where's the Glory? A few months ago a desperate and deadly conflict commenced in Europe between France and Italy on the one side and Austria on the other. As to the cause of the war every one is familiarthat is, as familiar as it is possible to become with unsatisfactory abstractions, for the press of both Europe and this country have been flooded with detailed, unsatisfactory and uninteresting particulars for many months. The bone and sinew of the two countries, France and Austria, met at Magenta and at Salferino, and at other points, led on by their respective masters, their Emperorsthey have met hand to hand in deadly strife, the plains of a beautiful country have been strewn with the dead and dying; the soil which but yesterday, as it were, was the abode of peace, plenty and quiet has been laid waste and saturated with they are: human gore-but where's the glory? Echo answers where! If we are to believe the particulars which accompanied the declarations of peace received by the last arrival France has gained nothing, while Austria has lost but little. Save one hundred thousand brave men left lifeless on the field then neither power have anything to boast of. If the recollection of the dying agonies of these, or the heart-rending spectacle of the widows and orphans who will meet the victorious armies on their return to their homes, be glory, both of the contending powers have it. But except the memory of these comrades-in-arms we can see nothing for which either France or Austria should send np a petition.

Peace! They cry peace! but still there will be no peace. Europe can know no continued peace until their whole framework of government be changed. The different powers must not only become more liberal towards each other, but they must be more liberal to their own subjects. This peace is but the lulling of the storm which ere long-a few months or years at most-will break out with redoubled fury. The peace has been es tablished over one hundred thousand of their fellow-countrymen whose warm hearts have ceased to beat, and the Emperors of France and Austria get all the glory. Let them have it.

Messrs. Gilmer and Waddell.

It really seems to us that Mr. Waddell has Mr Gilmer in a tight place. It will be recollected that these gentlemen were both candidates for Congress two years ago and that they consented to submit their respective claims to a committee of gentlemen who decided that Mr. Waddell should withdraw and leave the field to Messrs. Gilmer and Williams. Mr. Gilmer was reported at the time to have said that not only himself but his children and his grand children would ever be under obligations to Mr. Waddell, and that if he (Waddell) desired to be a candidate two years hence he should have the influence of Mr. Gilmer and his funds. Instead of acquainting the Graham Convention with these facts and refusing the use of his name, Mr. Gilmer suffers himself to be nominated and then accepts the nomination, notwithstanding his sacred promise to Mr. Waddell that he would not be in his way. The same parties that were candidates two years ago are now in the field, and Mr. Waddell publishes in the last Standard certificates from J. H. Haughton, H. A. London and W. A. Nash to prove that Mr. Gilmer did promise two years ago not to be again a candidate. From all these facts we do not see how Mr. Gilmer could become a candidate in opposition to Mr. Waddell at this time. He may say that he could not disregard the wishes of the Convention which nominated him; that will not do, he should have apprised the Convention that he was under a sacred promise not to become a candidate and then he would not have been nominated.

NOT TO BE WONDERED AT .- A correspondent of the Norfolk Day Book says that there is an old blind negro in a hovel in Cumberland Street, in that City, who has only had his bed made up four times in four years, that he is suffering in want, destitution, and filth, and wants some one to do something. So does the Day Book call upon somebody to do something, but we doubt whether the negroe's condition has been relieved or not. Norfolk is no worse in this respect than other communities, either, but the subject is too near home. If the suffering negro was in Africa or the Fegee Islands some of the "Societies" would attend to him at once.

CHANGE OF LOCATION .- The Williamston Mercury has been discontinued at Williamston, but will be issued in a short time from Tawboro', N. C. political complexion.

READ .- Read the communication of "A Spectator" on the "New Directory." It expresses some plain truths in a plain way. Wonder what the cottages and flocks of Piedmont and Lombarwill be done at the next meeting? Who abolished dy, they could not stain with blood as many or who reinstated?

Life at Old Point.

"Bricks," a correspondent of the Washington States, writing from the famed Old Point Comfort Va., where there are now a large number of visitors, give us the following glimpse of things as "The society here is all the most fastidious critic could well desire; it at once strikes the visitor with a true sense of well-bred refinement and courtesy. No stiff formality or ostentatious indulgence in useless preludes and superfluity. see very little disposition to form cliques and classes, as is the custom at the "stiff and formal resorts of fashion" at the North. There it requires no great degree of perspicuity to distinguish the parcenue from those of the "manor born." It is hard to galvanize an upstart anywhere; put them anywhere you will, their lowbred merit will pop out. Sectional feeling, ond stiff, put-on-airs of forced ostentation, sink into utter insignificance here. Nothing but true and social inter-course, with good feeling, can pervade such a genial atmosphere.

Let us enter the spacious ball room of the Hygeia at mid day, when all seek the pleasure of its shade. Here we behold at once the social effect of true refinement. We notice the opulent planter of the South engaged at chess with a mercantile friend from the North In another corner we are attracted by the loud and cheerful laugh of a bbls. at $3 for Virgin, and $2.85 for Yellow Dip, sturdy Western farmer, who is delighted at the | $\psi$ 280 lbs. idea of having beaten his shrewd and calculating friend from the East at a well-contested game of black servant attending on their relative charges, who are enjoying themselves in their childish glee, while the mothers gather around in friendly intercourse, and dwell upon the merits of their offspring with an eloquence and impassioned feeling opinion that she has the model babe. "Styels which conform to Beauty's several faces,

Which shed on all the most becoming graces." All here is gayety, good humor, wit, sentiment, romance, and diversion beyond all measure; the eye is continually entertained with the splendor of dress, the dashing and gay uniforms of the officers attached to the Garrison, which by the lustre of the button have attached the fair sex to them. When beaux are most desired, the uniform is most decidedly attractive; for,

"Maidens, like moths, are ever eaught by glare." The ear is enlivened with the merry peals of some flute voice, and the gay laugh of some de-lightful "fair one" revolving mid a circle of gallants, "each envying the other her, lightest smile," or smallest favor, strains of most eloquent music steals o'er the assembly, gayly inviting the wor-shippers of Terpiscore to indulge in the "mazes of the giddy dance. # The Honors of War.

The following extracts which we take from an exchange drawing a contrast between the plains of Piedmont and Lombardy last spring and now are enough to chill the stoutest heart. How forcibly and how vividly the mind is filled with all the horors of deadly conflict and wholesale slaughter while we read them?

A few months ago, the plains of Piedmont and Lombardy, the most beautiful and fertile portion of Europe, were rich in the glories of spring, and rejoicing in the premise of a plenteous harvest .with the prospect of a fruitful season, whilst their humble cottages were the abodes of peace and purity. Health and happiness brightened every face; no harm was done by man to his fellow; even the poor, dumb beasts, performed securely and faithfully their part in the useful toil of the day, and enjoyed undisturbed the sleep of night. A scene of more exquisite repose than a Piedmont landscape, at sunset, as it has been described by travelers, sung by poets, and sketched by artists, it would be difficult to find on this troubled earth. One might well exclaim, upon looking upon such a scene, as it appears to us in pictures and in graphic descriptions, "If there's peace to be found in the world, it is here, it is here " But what a fearful change! The sudden tornado that lashes a placid sea into commotion, and strews the shores with shipwreck; the volcano under the same name and without any change of that pours its tide of lava upon the plain, and bu ries cities beneath a river of fire, does not work Jonathan Tyson, Frederick, Maryland. as terrible and as sad a destruction. If, instead of Zouaves and Turcos from Africa, we could imagine all the beasts of prey of that continent let loose during the night in enormous droves upon thresholds; they could not pile the plains with as many victims; they could not leave such incurable lacerations in human hearts, as the more sanguinary and destructive human brutes whose Sr. Louis, July 25.—The Overland California diabolical warfare has converted that Paradise into a Pandemonium.

Such are the scenes which are now presented in a country which, only last spring, was the most serene and lovely spot of the earth, smilling in content and security, and brilliant with hope and happiness.
