Waterloo.

No trained soldiery on the military field have ever gained such great and such easy victories as have the farmers in their recent invasions in the moral, political and financial world. But we warn this army not as any "Sir Omoo," but as one great, though humbly interesting, that Waterloo is yet so come. The enemy have drawn our fire, felt our strength, and are satisfied and ready to risk a decisive battle. They have made choice of ground, and it is that occupied by the Grange Agents. We see a spirit of defiance showing itself here all along the lines. We have never thought that it was necessary for us to occupy this ground; it was not discreet or good generalship. These Sentinels we set up were simply targets. They are being ridiculed and snubbed without stint. This is a work properly belonging to middle men, and none of our class should have been chosen to perform it. Our object could have been accomplished much more effectively by throwing the whole force of our patronage into the hands of some few of these old reliable and well established dealers. It would not have injured these men in their boards of trade, or social or business relations. Simply receiving the trade of a number of farmers as a body could not have given offence, but our present mode of agents from our own class has too much the appearance of unnecessary aggression. The other mode would have accomplished our object more by a spirit of competition for our trade. We would not harm the hair on the head of a single middle man. All we desire to see done is to "reduce the relations" of some of them a little. We would not care if there were many more for us to feed, but we claim that the producer has the best right to be the fattest and sleekest man. We have had smooth sailing, but we tell our brother Grangers everywhere that now is the time to be at their posts ready for duty. From this time forward the battle will wax warmer and warmer until it is lost or won. These are simply our editorial views. Our betters are in the lead and we are prepared to obey, but members must attend their duties upon the Grange.—Oxford Leader.

N. C. STATE GRANGE, P. O. H., Secretary's Office.

Resolved, That the Secretary be requested to draft suitable resolutions of respect for the memory of our deceased Brother Charles F. Harris, (late the Associate Editor of the "State Agricultural Journal"), and that they be published in the same. WHEREAS it hath pleased the great Master of the Universe to remove from our midst our Worthy Brother C. F. Harris, therefore be it Resolved, That in the death of Charles F. Harris we have sustained a great loss, as the deceased was an active and faithful friend of our order, a true Patron of Husbandry and an earnest worker for the interest of our cause, a cause that he loved so fervently and well Resolved, As an editor of our organ he gave general satisfaction and promises of great usefulness to the order, being a ready writer, full of wit and humor, beloved by all who knew him, a genial pleasant companion, and true friend with but one weakness, which must be forgiven in the remembrance of his many virtues, therefore will we deplore this error we should ever try to emulate the many good deeds of his life. Resolved, That in giving this expression of our appreciation of his worthiness as a Patron, we trust that our deceased Brother hath the "Pass Word" that will admit him within the golden "gate" of eternal happiness. Resolved, That we extend to the family of our deceased Brother the affectionate sympathies of the State Grange and of our membership throughout the State. G. W. LAWRENCE, Sec'y.

The Charleston correspondent of the Augusta Constitutionalist shows that the courts of South Carolina are now practically closed to the respectable portion of the white citizens. The drawing of juries is manufactured by the corrupt officials so that a jury panel is generally organized with about thirty negroes and six or seven white men. A good many of the lazy rascally negro politicians depend upon the pay of jurymen for support. The result is that no thiefing official or man for that matter who has money, can be convicted.

At a prayer meeting an old man got up and prayed for a son now in a felon's cell for the crime of murder. Another old man tremblingly joined his prayers, adding that he too, had had a son, but he had been murdered. Their names were made known, and the fathers of Edward S. Stokes and James Fisk, Jr., stood side by side.—Chicago Tribune

Men grow mellow in their cups; women get tight in their corsets. When going up stairs a gentleman should always precede a lady, but when coming down he should allow her to pass first. Mrs. Lincoln, upon the petition of her son Robert, has been sent to an insane asylum.

The ladies of Texas are endeavoring to collect money for the purpose of purchasing a home for Jefferson Davis in that State and presenting it to him. The income of the New York Herald last year was $1,700,000, and James Gordon Bennett received $600,000 for his share of the profits. The young man contrives to live after a fashion on this meagre income. One of the saddest things about human nature is, that a man may guide others in the path of life without walking in it himself; but he may be a pilot and yet a cast-away. She lived in N. w Orleans, and the town-belle says she was seventeen. She had a can of coal oil in her hands, and she heard her little sister crying out in the yard. She innocently set the can on the stove and she started for the door, but the can and its contents got there before her, and then the little sister had something to cry for, in deed.

The government has sent two thousand Springfield rifles to Texas as an initial solution of the reading troubles, and if the Texans of to-day are the equals of the Texans of former times, this will be a solution indeed. The Rev. (?) C. W. Warren, with a half dozen aliases, who some two years since created much sensation in Wilmington by his rascality has again come to the front having figured quite prominently in Baltimore and frequently in New Orleans under the name of Rev. W. E. Copeland. He was arrested in New Orleans but being paroled made his escape and has not since been heard from. He is a scoundrel of the first water. News.

North Carolina is tasting the bitter fruits of her new usury law. The States on either side believe in leaving money, like any other species of property, to command its price in the market, but North Carolina in the center, foolishly thinks she can dictate the price. What is the result? Wilmington is in despair. Several of her banking institutions are withdrawing across the State line; the bank of Reidsville has gone to Danville, Virginia, and large amounts of capital have been transferred from the eastern part of the State to the bank of Marion, South Carolina. That's the way an usury law works. In accepting an invitation to participate in the ceremonies at the National cemetery at Memphis, "I appreciate and am in full sympathy with the spirit of manly friendship and reconciliation which prompted the recent interchange of so many soldierly courtesies among those men who, with equal courage, met so often as foemen upon the field of battle, and sincerely trust that the time is not far in the future when the soldiers of late war will cease to remember the angry passions engendered by the bloody struggle. Between those who were true to their colors during the late war, there can be no hate or bitterness. Since all have now one flag and one country, there ought to be no estrangement or sectional antagonism." Gen. Pillow, in response to a similar invitation in behalf of the Mexican veterans, returns a cordial acceptance.
