

Remarks of Senator Lehman, OF CRAVEN, On the Public Debt, on Tuesday, the 12th.

Mr. President: The subject of the debt and finances of the State unfolds such a wide field of inquiry that analysis is scarcely practicable in an impromptu discussion. It is sufficient, however, for my present purpose to know that the total amount of the principal and interest of the public debt in round number is a very large condition. Add to this the aggregate indebtedness of our cities, towns and counties, and we are forced to contemplate a spectacle of figures, at once vast and appalling.

visit every town and county in the State and bring back your answer. Attend to it not only in your pleasure, but in the catalogue and inquire how many school houses and teachers are needed? How much of education are our children receiving. These are considerations which we as a people cannot ignore, if we would keep pace with the progress of civilization of the age. For these reasons I say the people are not able to pay anything now by way of interest on the public debt and hence, too, they are unwilling to pay. Repudiation is no part of my scheme but "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Let us once more cease driving our sons from our midst by a system of political oppression. Let us in earnest and with good feeling invite capital and immigration hither and before the next decade will stand around, and our country will stand as a sisterhood of States, and instead of being worth only one hundred and twenty-one millions of dollars, she will have increased her wealth to five hundred millions of dollars, and I feel confident that being able to pay, she will be most willing to pay to the utmost farthing of her legitimate debt. It is true the creditor has rights which we are bound to respect, and his debt I shall never question, but all I can do and say in his behalf now is—let him take the State's interest in our public works.

Remarks of Senator King, In the Senate, Dec. 13th, 1871, on the bill proposing Amendments to the Constitution of the State.

Mr. King said: I approve of many of the proposed amendments to the Constitution of the State included in the bill now before the Senate; it will be seen, by referring to the Journals of the Constitutional Convention of 1868, that I then opposed a number of the amendments proposed to be stricken out or changed.

Mr. President, I will now briefly state the sections that I am willing to vote to strike out or change, viz: Strike out all that portion pledging the State to the payment of the public debt of the State.

I consider any clause in relation to the payment of the State debt unnecessary, therefore opposed in the Convention all sections pledging the State to the payment of any debt.

I am in favor of striking out the section providing for the Superintendent of Public Works, as I consider the office of no use whatever, and entirely unnecessary.

I would strike out the Corporate powers of Townships, thereby divesting Townships of all powers they now possess. I would strike out that clause requiring the Census to be taken by the State, as I believe taking the Census by State to be an unnecessary expense.

I would change the meeting of the General Assembly from annual, to biennial sessions, once in two years, and sufficiently often for the Legislature to meet.

THE AMERICAN WASHER! PRICE, $5.50.

The American Washer Saves Money, Time, and Drudgery. The Fatigue of Washing Day no Longer Dreaded. It is but Economy, Efficiency, and Clean Clothing, Sure.

It is the smallest, most compact, most portable, most simple in construction, most easily operated. A child ten years old, with a few hours practice, can thoroughly comprehend and effectively use it.

It is a miniature giant, doing more work and of a better quality, than the most elaborate and costly. One half of the labor is fully saved by its use, and the clothes will last one hundred times longer.

It is a perfect forerunner of a wringer is for wringing. The price another paramount inducement to purchasers, has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every household.
