Mr. Tilden's flower garden always suggests itself as a convenient theme when the interviewer begins to talk on a subject upon which the Governor prefers to be silent. At the mere mention of Governor Seymonr's name Governor Tilden exclaims, "Excuse me, I want to show my flowers." Four years ago the late Mr. Greeley gave wood-chopping matinees at Chappaqua as part of the factics of his canvass. Now Governor Tilden exhibits his flower garden when he wants his canvass kept in the background.—N. I Herald.

There is a Virginia carpetbagger, living in Raleigh, with not half, nor a quarter, of the ability of Judge Tourgee, who figures largely as a local politician, who is denominated by some as "horn-eyed." The Victory in Vermont.

prepared for the Republican victory which has been achieved. The organs of Mr. Tilden were careful yesterday to warn us that if we hoped to elect Hayes for President we ought to carry Ver-mont by 27,000 majority. This was based on a deliberate misrepresentation, because the average of the last four elections of Governor preceding the election of a President has been but 22,941, or in round numbers 23,000, and Fairbanks, therefore, received but 23,000 majority yesterday, we should have had abundant reason to be satisfied, and to expect the strong majority for President which we have received ever since 1860. But the Democratic organs, as we have said, took the trouble to point out to that we must reach 27,000 or be prepared for defeat, and that if we did reach 27,000 we might be assured of victory. We accept their own mode of interpreting the election, and ask them what they think of the actual returns.

These show that the Republican had carried the State by at least 28,000, and indicate very strong probability that it will be over 30,000. The returns come in slowly, but those which reach us first, though they are from the district where the Democrats are the strongest, and where they expected to make the greatest gains, show that if the two parties maintain the same relative position in the remainder of the State, the Republicans cannot fail to get at least 27,000 majority. The returns from the remainder of the State, however, will not bear out even the poor promise afforded to the Democrats by those first at hand. On the contrary they will, according to most accurate and careful observers, give decided Republican gains, and the State may be safely set down for 30,000. This is a good beginning. The people of Vermont are among the most intelligent in the country. They understand the questions they are voting on, and they have given a decision which every one must respect. Nor this alone. In 1868, when the voters of Vermont cast 58,000 ballots for Governor, and gave the Republicans a majority of 27,000, they cast only 56,000 for President, and the Republican majority was 32,000. This was because 2,000 more Republicans came to the polls in November, and 3,000 Democrats staid at home. In 1872 the same thing occurred on nearly as large a scale. In other words, a decided Republican majority at this first important election of the year fixes the set of the tide. The effect in Vermont is only that which is felt everywhere. It will show itself on Monday in Maine, and when the Dem-ocrats of this State meet in Saratoga
