Mr. Thomas-That such rank injustice should have been done is almost inconceivable.

Jeff kept on until finally with a couple of lefts on the jaw he had Corbett worried. Corbett landed left and right, but Jeff made him clinch when he put the right into the stomach. Jeff chased Corbett around two sides of the ring only to be clinched. The round was concluded by Jeff getting to the

Corbett finished with a splendid defense.

Round Twenty-four-Corbett blocked a terrific left for the stomach as a starter and he stopped another blow to the ribs. Jeff shot the left over to the ear and put the right to the neck. Corbett jabbed the champion's eye and nose with a left and swung left and right to the neck. Jeff tried a left hook for the jaw, but it was stopped. Jeff the jaw. Corbet retreated, but Jeff drove a left to the stomach. He fol lowed it with a heavy right on the ribs and then shot the left out straight from the shoulder. The punch caught Corbett squarely on the point of the jaw. He reeled a moment and fell over backwards, his head striking the ropes. As Corbett collapsed Referee White had been counting off the seconds, and when the fateful ten had elapsed Corbett was out. When Jeff had been officially declared the winner, Corbett's seconds rushed to him and picked him up in their arms. They placed him upon his chair and put a bottle of ammonia under his nose. In a few moments he revived and looked around in apparent astonishment. Jeff was at his side immediately and asked him if he was hurt. Corbett was dazed. "It was a good fight, Jim." said Jeff grinning. "I do not remember anything
