Mr. Spooner read the order of February 15, 1899, for the extermination of all but Filipinos in Manila, and asked: "Could anything be worse?" He maintained that under these conditions no one could scriously demand the withdrawal of United States troops.

Mr. Pettigrew questioned the authenticity of the order, and a sharp controversy ensued.

Mr. Spooner said it came in an official statement from the Wak Department.

Mr. Pettigrew charged that the document read by Mr. Spooner was manufactured evidence for effect in this country. Mr. Spooner said it was of equal credibility with much that Mr. Pettigrew had presented.

Mr. Pettigrew in reply said that official reports were as good evidence against the government, but not against Filibinos.

Mr. Spooner retorted that the South Dakota Senator held that everybody was a liar who produced proof against the assertions which he (Pettigrew) made against the government. Mr. Spooner contended that the President was doing his whole duty in the Philippines.
