AN EASTERN NATIONAL PARK

A Project for One in New England, to Embrace Parts of Three States

(Lewiston Evening Journal.) There is talk of a national park in New England, including part of Maine, as a forest reservation. The entire area of forest reservations and parks approximates fifty million acres. The parks differ from the forest reserves in that no lumbering can be carried on within them, and their game animals are protected. The mining laws do not apply within their territory, except in Mount Rainler Park, and they are in care of government troops. The forest resersations, on the other hand, are administered by the Secretary of the Interior, through the general land office. Maine ROSES, CARNATION New Hampshire already have State and forestry commissions, and it might be practicable to secure their cooperation in the centrol and direction of such a reservation as is suggested. While several States have acquired forest reservations or have taken measures to protect such areas, the Federal Government possesses the facilities for controlling such reservations in a bread way, unaffected by local or private in terests, upon plans that will nermit the use of private forests that remain, directing with intelligence such cutting as s proper, and promoting new growth on the denuded areas. The subject is exceedingly important in its relation to the prosperity of the farmer, who is largely dependent on climate and rainfall; to the great manufacturing interests, more or less dependent on the water power furnished by our rivers; to the rapidly growing cities and towns whose water supply is drawn from our porthern lakes, and to the health and pleasure of thousands who annually visi; the mountains and uplands of northern Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.
