while the sighs and whispers of the The Class of Forty-six Were "old year" were still haunting us, Col. James Martin of Winston, N. C., loving husband, father and faithful friend, passed into the life eternal. He had been suffering from a complication of diseases for many months, which were borne uncomplainingly, and with that patient, heroic spirit, which was a part of his nature, and which distinguished him from other men. His footsteps through life wandered in directions where he could do most good, ever ready to sympathize with the sorrowing, and to rejoice with the cheerful. A man of the highest sense of honor, proving himself always loyal to his friends, guarding with the most sacred and jealous care, the confidence they reposed in him. Well do I remember when affliction came to my home, the night of starless grief we all pass through he, my life-long friend, was the first to offer help and comfort, friendly offices most needed and appreciated, and now while standing over his new-made grave, inhaling the fragrance of the flowers placed upon it by affectious hands, a sweeter incense even than the health of lowers arises from the lowly mound, the memory of those kindly deads.
