The Japanese are said to never show sorrow. Probably they get angry in place of feeling sorrowful.

Looks like the liberty of gentlemen is being threatened! Some Wall Street men have been arrested as sharpers.

This country has no reason to feel disappointed and appalled at the riots in Japan. Look at our own Chicago!

The Clansman, the new play by Thomas Dixon, Jr., is now on the stage, the first performance being given in Norfolk last night.

It is claimed that a new planet has been discovered. We shall expect Col. Pinckney Ennis to tell us all about it in the forthcoming edition of his almanac.

Mr. J. Frank Maddry of Durham was in the sanctum of The Post yesterday and informed us that the city of Durham is coming over to the state fair.

A man who pays a fee of $25,000 to the person who performs his marriage ceremony certainly deserves to escape the expense of divorce proceedings later in life.

But little has been said yet about the midway at the coming fair; but the midway will be there, and the sawdust and fried bolognas while you wait and listen to the squeak.

We were glad to meet a son of our old friend, the late W. W. McDairmid of Lumberton, in the city yesterday. Young Mr. McDairmid was on his way to Chapel Hill to take a law course.

Over in the Philippines a lake of whitewash is said to have been discovered. May soon be needed when the grafters get busy. Meantime it is kept around handy all the time in this country.

A novel about the money kings is to be written by Hall Caine. It is one thing to talk about money and quite another thing to get money out of such talk. However, we hope Mr. Caine's venture will be a financial success.

The Times-Union laments because the Greene and Gaynor case is still undecided, and says: "It would not take a good judge of human nature long to decide that case on its merits." The experts probably have charge of it.

In the light of recent events it will not be surprising if some expert comes along and swears that beating a man on the head when he has heart trouble is the proper treatment, and that it has a tendency to stimulate circulation and strengthen the action of the heart.

LET'S KEEP IT STRAIGHT

The Stately Enterprise of this week contains the following in an editorial on the Nall case:

The four attendants who were placed in the Wake county jail for alleged maltreatment and murder of Thomas Nall, a patient in the central hospital for the insane, have been released. The coroner's jury which investigated facts surrounding the death of Nall say that the clot of blood on the brain was caused by congestion and not from a blow.

How Editor Blivins happened to make such a mistake is not clear, for the verdict of the coroner's jury, who made a long and patient investigation, was not susceptible of any misconstruction. It is short and positive. Here it is:

"The jury say for their verdict that Thomas H. Nall came to his death as the result of blows inflicted by J. C. King, L. R. High, Jack Peele and W. F. Durham."

The Enterprise probably has reference to the investigation subsequently made by the board of directors, a sort of ex-parte proceeding, as the lawyers would say, in which mainly expert testimony was considered and whose report is now waiting for Governor Glenn's return before it is given to the public. Acting on the assumption that the experts, who did not see the remains of Nall, know more about the case than the doctor who performed the autopsy and the coroner who conducted the inquest—also a doctor—and the jury of intelligent gentlemen who sat on the case, heard the evidence and viewed the remains, the solicitor of this district admitted the four attendants to bail in the sum of one thousand dollars each, and that without waiting for the report of the board of directors.

There is a decided difference in the coroner's inquest and the investigation by the board of directors. This difference takes the form of a contest, the testimony of experts in the latter having a tendency to disprove the evidence and findings of the former. In that shape the whole matter goes up to the superior court next week. One point of difference as to Nall's condition comes out in the testimony of Dr. McKee before the coroner, and that of Dr. Ferebee before the board. Dr. McKee said Nall was in good physical condition. Dr. Ferebee said Nall's physical condition showed serious heart trouble when he examined him June 22, just two months before his death.

And Dr. Ferebee thinks he talked to Dr. McKee of Nall's condition. The attendants having the patient in charge ought also to have been informed that he had a weak or disordered heart. If they were so informed the more inexcusable was their conduct towards him and the sterner the condemnation it deserves.

The action of Solicitor Jones was a surprise. The question arises, what is the use of a coroner's inquest if the findings thereof can be set aside on the strength of expert hypotheses in ex-parte proceedings? Strictly speaking, the hearing before the directors may not have been ex-parte, but it was certainly extra-judicial and altogether informal.

TAR HEEL ORGANIZATION FIRST

The current number of the Confederate Veteran contains the following which will interest war veterans in this state and all who are interested in keeping the record of events straight:

"The Third North Carolina organization antedates the 'Old First Virginia Infantry, organization in a sense, as may be seen by reference to files of the Veteran. Away back in 1893 (June issue, page 265) there is an account of a meeting of the officers of the Third North Carolina Infantry as reported by James I. Metz, secretary, in which it is stated that the officers met to receive the remains of Colonel William M. Parsley on February 2, 1866, and that at that meeting it was reported by the surviving officers of the Third North Carolina Infantry, in good standing, form themselves into

GROWING LENGTHWISE

You want the children to grow, but not all lengthwise. When they start that way Scott's Emulsion will help them to grow right—with due plumpness and outward proportion, and with inward vigor and good spirits.

The Emulsion increases digestive power and strengthens the vital organs to get the best and make the most out of all the other food. It gives a kind of help that every growing child ought to have.

an association,' etc., and that they meet every year on May 16 to celebrate the anniversary of their regiment as long as one member is left. In October, 1888, according to that record, the constitution and by-laws were so changed as to admit enlisted men. The commander of the regiment in service, Colonel William L. De Rosset, who has ever been faithful and zealous, was made president of the association."

MULLINS AGAIN CHIEF

The Raleigh board of aldermen acted wisely in again electing Chief of Police J. H. Mullins to succeed himself. Chief Mullins has held the office for six years and has ever made a courteous, reliable and efficient officer. He has been criticized by some people because he has been unable to bring about reforms in the moral life of the city which all the churches and other reform organizations have been unable to produce; and there was an attempt to defeat him for that reason. It is expecting too much of one mortal man, and Chief Mullins' course has been vindicated by an almost unanimous vote of the board of aldermen. We congratulate him, and we congratulate the aldermen on their refusal to be stampeded in this instance from what they conceived to be the right course.

COTTON GOING HIGHER

The editor of The Post received the following telegram yesterday afternoon from Ashley Horne & Son of Clayton:

"Warn the farmers that when the conditions of the crop are fully known cotton will sell much higher."

This advice seems to be well founded. Mr. Horne is one of the most sagacious and far-seeing business men in the state, a close observer, one whose opinions are formed after careful and deliberate investigation. What he says is worthy of note. We believe there will be a steady upward tendency in the cotton market. It may not change materially within the next thirty days, and there may be a slight decline before the middle of October, but prices are going higher and our advice would be to market slowly.

In New York a movement is being agitated for the removal of all grade crossings. Probably in the interest of hurrying traffic rather than safety to life, as it appears from newspaper reports that more people are killed on the overhead and underground lines than on the surface roads.

A clipping in The Post yesterday was credited to the Chatham Chronicle when it should have been Charlotte Chronicle.

We Need a Reformatory (Asheville Citizen.)

There have been several efforts made to secure a state reformatory for North Carolina, but the state is still without an institution where youthful criminals can be detained. It is owing to this fact that several boy offenders, who have been caught redhanded in house and store breaking, have evaded the clutches of the law. The average judge is rightfully opposed to sending young lads to the chain-gang, where the influences with which they would be surrounded would accomplish greater harm than could be suffered by their restoration to liberty. The evils of existing conditions in this state can readily be determined when, by force of circumstances related above, children, whose proclivities for wrong doing could be nipped in the bud, are turned loose again to indulge in perhaps greater excesses for the reason that the state openly confesses that there is no place of detention for them.

Something must be done to bring about a reform in youthful training. Today all civilized countries see the importance of training children. Many states have made education compulsory, and humanitarians have founded institutions which look after the welfare of children outside of school hours, and endeavor to keep them out of evil company and of the streets. But as long as this world shall continue to exist, as long as it shall be inhabited by human beings, we shall continue to have criminals, born criminals; men in whom a cruel fate has sown seed of cruelty, whose way of reasoning is different from that of normal people, and who are doomed from the day of their birth to commit crimes. There is no therapy against this inherited disease. The only alternatives are to kill them, or place them in an institution where there could be no wrong. There are others far more numerous—habitual criminals, or criminals who err because they are unable to stand a sudden temptation or an outburst of pas-tion, and these we can redeem and bring back to the right road.

To bring them back to this road the state can do and ought to do much. It is a duty it owes to the people to provide institutions where the young criminal can be trained in the way he should go. It is no credit to North Carolina that she has repeatedly rejected all efforts looking toward the establishment of a reformatory for youthful criminal offenders.

Autumn in Stokes (Danbury Reporter.)

Millions and millions of daisies, black-eyed susans and golden-rods everywhere—the air clear and buoyant—the streams dark and flowing in silence—the corn and pumpkins ripening and yellowing in the bottoms—the wild muscadines clustering in the woods—chinquapins open, and fox-grapes for the climbing. Then the soft nightfall and the call of the big owl on the ridge—the sharp bark of the fox on the mountainside—the dreamy bank of fog hanging over the valley—the rise of the full harvest moon in all its glory, and the answer in the bright fires that burn on a thousand hills where the merry tobacco-curers keep their lonely vigils, cheered by the music of the untamed banjo, and the sweet taters roasting in the stove. This is autumn in Stokes.

Robert Christy, a venerable Britisher now visiting this country, says the New York Tribune, reminiscently tells of his long acquaintance with the Prince of Wales, now King Edward, and narrates the story of his christening when a baby. All of the stores of the empire were illuminated that night and Albert Edward's initials, "A. E.," were displayed in all of the windows, when one of the courtiers remarked, "Before he wears the crown the lad'll need the three other vowels."

POINTED PARAGRAPHS
