

Woman's Kidney Troubles

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing This Fatal Disease.

Mrs. J. W. Lang and Mrs. S. Frake

Of all the diseases known, with which women are afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so-called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women, and thousands have been cured of serious kidney derangements by it. Derangements of the feminine organs quickly affect the kidneys, and when a woman has such symptoms as pain or weight in the loins, backache, bearing down pains, urine too frequent, scanty or high colored, producing scalding or burning, or deposits like brick dust in it; unusual thirst, swelling of hands and feet, swelling under the eyes or sharp pains in the back running down the inside of her groin, she may be sure her kidneys are affected and should lose no time in combating the disease with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the woman's remedy for woman's ills.

The following letters show how marvelously successful it is.

crepe de chine over taffeta, and also carrying pink roses. The bride then entered, leaning on the arm of her uncle, Maj. S. F. Telfair of Raleigh, her face beaming with happiness. She was attired in a dark-brown tailored suit and formed a picture which no artist can imitate. She was met at the altar by Mr. Carter, accompanied by his best man, Mr. W. B. Harding. The words making them man and wife were then spoken by Rev. L. E. Thompson. During the ceremony the beautiful strains of "Then You'll Remember Me" were softly rendered by the choir, who were concealed in a large bank of ferns and palms immediately behind the pulpit.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the Atlantic Coast Line depot, where, amid showers of rice and with the well-wishes of scores of friends, they took the morning train for a tour of western North Carolina.

UNIVERSITY ANNIVERSARY

time for the south to claim its own in the history of the world, as its field was richer than that of almost any other section of the world. His theme was "The Status of the South in the Past—Its Decadence From That Status." Appended to the paper was the article, "The Status of the South and Its Restoration." Looking backward the past of the south is luminous. In citation of this the work of Jefferson, Madison, Marshall, Washington was reviewed. They deserve to be called the founders of the American union. Of the first fifteen presidents eight were from the south. Jefferson inaugurated the policy of expansion. This beginning has been followed by various heads of the government since then, but to Jefferson its origin must be attributed.

The southern leaders were taught secession at West Point. Lee and the other great lights of the south had this inculcated in them during their stay there and the text books to bear out this statement are still in existence. Men of the south have been pre-eminent in war as well as in peace. Washington, Harrison, Scott of Tennessee, Scott of Virginia, Taylor of Kentucky, Lee, Jackson, Beauregard stand out as the great military leaders of the country.

The so-called civil war was not a civil war but a war between the sections. Lord Woolsey ranks Lee with Wellington and the other great captains of the English speaking race. It took 800,000 men well equipped four years to wear out 125,000 scantily fed and poorly armed Confederate soldiers. What greater achievement can there be than that of the southern soldiers? History has no parallel for their deeds.

When the union was started the thirteen original states were slave-holding bodies. All other countries had freed slaves or did free them after a short while. When the northern states found that slave-holding was not a success financially they gave up the practice.

When the south, which was the better home for the negro, was becoming rich as the result of the negro slave, the northern people very soon observed it and lost little time in issuing the emancipation proclamation.

The terrible reconstruction period came near ruining the southland. Major Bingham graphically pictured the fearful period of oppression and depression of carpet-baggers and northern scoundrels. The southern man, in desperation finally rose up and overthrew the negro and the carpet-bag domination.

The wealth of the south now is seen in the cotton fields, in the business world, in the maritime industry, and primarily in the manufacturing world. No phase of industry is wanting in the life of the south today.

In politics the southern Democrat is being excluded from no important position in the direction of the party and the dearth of leaders as a result of this is clearly seen. The northern Democrats have no leaders of any real power. Let the southern man have an opportunity and he will readily attain his rightful position in the political world. Republicans and Democrats both are right in keeping the ballot from the ignorant people taken under the protection of our country within the last five years. Both parties see the danger of such a course and have taken a firm position in regard to it.

In order to regain one lost prestige we must take advantage of the opportunities placed in our pathway. We must keep in touch with the vital questions of our time and assert our views in regard to these.

The negro is a dead issue so far as his importance in political questions is concerned. The northern people disfranchised the illiterate white people of their section and we in our turn took the initiative and deprived the negro of the right of suffrage. We realize the position of the negro and will continue our education of him as long as he submits. If anybody can conserve the negro we can do it.

The race problem is temporarily settled, so let us cease discussion of it.

The south's mission in the future is to resume here national leadership in the government of America. Our government now is a plutocracy, a thing that is dangerous and tyrannical. When the time for the plutocratic and autocratic bosses to be displaced comes the leaders of the movement will be honored and the south will resume its position in the history of America.

Young gentlemen of the University of North Carolina, the future is open to you. The changes that have been wrought in our history within the past few years have changed the trend of our country's history. Take advantage of the future and grasp the situations as they reveal themselves to you.

We have gained an enviable position in the east by the driving out of the Spaniards. The peace of Portsmouth has been accomplished and the Panama canal is now a reality instead of a visionary proposition. One of the chief problems we will have to contend with in the future will be that of population. Within fifty years our population will be 250,000,000. With this increase in population will come increased opportunities. The illiterate man will have no chance in the future. The man with the trained mind will be the distinguished citizen of the future. One cannot have too much training, so take advantage of every opportunity afforded you. Just here Major Bingham gave a resume of the work done by the sons of the university and said that this university seemed to have imbued her sons with peculiar power to take advantage of the opportunities afforded them, especially among these may be cited Jas. K. Polk and William A. Graham. Polk was instrumental in securing the acquisition of the Pacific Coast. Secretary Graham was the cause of Commodore Perry's expedition to Japan which resulted in the opening of Japan to the world. Japan as a result of this opening has become the arbiter of the east. These national questions came directly from your predecessors, Jas. K. Polk and William A. Graham.

Colonel Bingham discussed exhaustively the tariff tax of the country. He showed it to be excessive, oppressive and prohibitory and declared it to be unjust and partisan legislation benefitting only the plutocrats of our country. Several other questions of vital interest to the American of today were discussed by Colonel Bingham in a masterly manner. His audience was highly interested in his remarks concerning the southern man of today and his work for the upbuilding of the negro race.

His address was one of great power. The remarks were addressed not to college boys but to university men, men who have to deal with the problem in the future that will arise, and men who will have to think out and deal with the problem of our national life. The address was a thoughtful and masterly one, dealing with the past and the days of the old south on the one hand and with the future of the south and the duties of the southern man on the other. He closed with a strong appeal to the university men present to face the future bravely and to deal with the problems as they arise.

The exercises were concluded with the "Song of the Old Alumnus" and with benediction pronounced by the Rev. J. W. Wildman.

Mrs. Hearty and Mrs. Brooks gave delightful and instructive accounts of the convention held last week at Morganton.

This chapter will give an entertainment very soon after the fair.

An invitation was accepted to meet next month with Mrs. R. H. Lewis.

Carter-Cordon

Washington, N. C., Oct. 12.—Special. One of the prettiest and most beautiful weddings that have lately taken place in this city, was solemnized at the Methodist church here Tuesday morning at 7:30 o'clock. The contracting parties were Mr. David Miller Carter, one of our most prominent and successful business men, and Miss Etta Fulford Cordon, one of Washington's fairest and most accomplished daughters.

The church was beautifully and artistically decorated in ferns and palms, the whole making a very pleasing effect and very appropriate for the occasion. Preceding the bridal party were four of Miss Cordon's most intimate friends, namely, Misses Lillian Moss and Margaret Jarvis, Messrs. Lyndon Shaw and Richard Bragaw. Next came the ushers, Messrs. R. A. Knight, Walter Credle, Frank Cox and H. T. Latham. Entering the aisles, they made their way to the altar, where they took positions on each side. Then the second maid of honor, Miss Celia Rund Bridgeman, entered. She was handsomely gowned in white crepe de chine and carried pink roses. Then came the first maid of honor, Miss Nan Cordon, sister of the bride, dressed in white
