

Weather Conditions
 An area of high barometer is now central over North Carolina and its influence is causing clear, cool weather east of the Mississippi river. The barometer is still low off the New England coast. An area of low pressure is central over Kansas, and has caused a rise in temperature from the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains to the Mississippi river. The barometer is rising on the north Pacific coast accompanied by cooler weather. Frost occurred in the Atlantic coast states and in all the southern states east of the Mississippi river. The weather in this vicinity will be fair tonight and Saturday and with the advance of the western low the wind will change to the south and the temperature will slowly rise.
