THE ORIGINAL PACKAGE BUSINESS.

Citizens Take the Matter into Their Own Hands—and Tell the Agent to Go—and he Goes.

(By United Press.)
FORT DODGE, Iowa, June 14.—The citizens of Dayton, Iowa, have taken the suppression of the "Original Package" business into their own hands. A couple of weeks ago, a branch of this industry was established there.

Although the town is strongly in favor of prohibition, no effort was made to check the now legalized traffic until a five-year-old boy was seen toddling across the street in a state of intoxication. Then the citizens arose in their might and told the "original package" man that he must go. The agent thought it wise not to disobey the order and has closed up his place of business and taken his departure.

TWO TOUCHING WAR SCENES.

How a Young Chatham County Soldier Died on the Field.

It may be said, perhaps, that every incident of a man's life has power to make him either better or worse; but this must be especially true of tragic experiences, of infrequent occurrence with most of us, but distressingly common to soldiers engaged in actual warfare. Scenes like the following, described by Major Small in his history of the Sixteenth Maine Regiment, could hardly have been witnessed without leaving some permanent impression upon the beholder.

After the battle of Gettysburg a number of men, in gray suits, were lying in a grove at the left of Cemetery Hill and sadly I made my way among the dead and dying proffering such assistance as sympathy dictated. One poor fellow about twenty-five years of age, was shot through the body. His wounds were few. "Only a drink of water, I am so cold—so cold! Won't you cover me up?" Then his mind wandered, and he murmured something about "Dear mother. So glad 'tis all over."

Soon came a clear sense of his condition. Would I write to his father and tell him how he died,—how he loved them at home? "Tell them all about it, won't you? Father's name is Robert Jenkins. I belong to the Seventh North Carolina—came from Chatham county. My name is Will—" and tearfully I covered his face.

A little further on my attention was attracted to a young man of Komper's brigade, I think. I knelt at his side and was looking at his strikingly handsome face, when he unclosed his eyes and gazed steadily into mine with such a questioning, hungry look, an appeal so beseeching, so eloquent! And I had no power to answer—could only ask where he was wounded.

"Don't talk to me, please," he said. A moment after he touched his breast, and I saw there was not a chance for him.

When asked if he was not afraid to die, he answered, "No; I am glad I am through. Oh! I hope this will end the war; will it?"

I asked him whether he was a Christian, and he began to make some answer but a sudden spasm of pain closed his eyes.

I could not bear to leave him, and had just put my face down close to his when he suddenly opened his eyes. I shall never forget their unearthly beauty, and the sweet, trusting expression which overspread his face, as he said to me, with a motion as if he would throw his arms around my neck, "I am going home—good-by!"

I did weep; I could not help it. I do not recollect his name; he may not have told me. I only remember that boy from the Sixteenth Maine carried him to the field hospital because they wanted to do so, although they top, saw it was nearly over.

A New Local B. and L. Association Board.

Its representative and general agent, Mr. H. S. Radcliffe, has been here for some days, and has enlisted the interest and co-operation of a number of leading business men of the city.

The very attractive and advantageous features of the association have proven to be just what many people here have been wanting, and a successful business in Raleigh is assured.

The officers elected last night were: President, Dr. V. E. Turner; Vice-President, Mr. B. R. Harding; Secretary and Treasurer, F. T. Ward. Directors, Messrs. O. B. Edwards, A. Q. Holladay, W. H. Holloway, Wm. Cram and John Ward. Attorney, C. M. Busbee, Esq.

The Appropriation Exhausted.

U. S. circuit court matters and business are quiet. The appropriation made by Uncle Sam for running the business is completely exhausted, and under such conditions there is little concern as to whether the business goes on or not.

Some connections of the judiciary are thinking more about the general deficiency bill now than any thing else. In addition to exhausting the appropriation, the court has incurred some indebtedness for business done, and these arrears must be paid out of the deficiency fund.

A Slanderer Arrested.

(Special to the STATE CHRONICLE.)
SHELBY, N. C., June 14.—Deputy Sheriff Andrews to-day arrested Decatur Gregg, who was convicted last October of slander. Gregg appealed to the Supreme Court which affirmed the decision of the State going to Arkansas. He returned about a month ago. His family are all sick in bed except one boy. His sentence was eighteen months on streets at which he will be put on Monday.

SEE HERE!

The Railroads Will See the Mark on the Depot Question—The City Must Keep Right Afloat.

For some years Raleigh bowed for a handsome depot. She has practically got it now, the companies having agreed to give the people what they so much wanted in this matter.

The site is ready, the plans are completed, and it is very probable that work will soon begin on construction.

Now the city is under obligations to do something in connection with this matter. It is properly the city's business to see that the main street leading to the depot be made one of the best and handsomest streets of the city. Paving is now being done on that street.

Does the city propose that only half of it shall be paved?—a half pavement on what will be the most used and therefore the most used street in the city? Further: Does the city propose that the sidewalks of the street shall present a careworn or unkempt appearance?

The CHRONICLE's notion is that this street shall be the most important one for several reasons. First: It will be used more than any other. Second: It will be taken by strangers and visitors as an index of what the city is.

Third: It will make the first impression on the visitor and that first impression WILL LAST FOREVER.

There are facts that no one will think of disputing. Hence that street ought to be in strict keeping with the best business streets of the town. It ought really to show what the city is. If a man gets off the train at any place in the world, and his first five minutes there does not create a favorable impression, it will be difficult for him to have a good impression afterward. If he steps out into a muddy or rough or ugly street, he conspires the whole town to the d—right away. He may be afterwards, feasted, banqueted, lionized and all that sort of thing in the same town, but he never forgets that mud, or that rough and ugly street, and these are the FIRST THINGS he speaks of when he talks about the town.

You all know how it is yourself; you all have been there (in some towns). The CHRONICLE therefore hopes that a main object of the municipality will be to put that street and the side-walks in just the right shape; and nobody knows better what the right shape is than the Raleigh board of aldermen.

FOR SUPERIOR COURT CLERK.

W. R. Allen, Esq., of Wayne, Endorsed and Urged for the Place. [Special Court CHRONICLE.]
The name of W. R. Allen, Esq., of Wayne, will be presented to the Judicial convention of the Fourth district, which will meet at Smithfield, July 1st, and his friends will ask for him the nomination for judge of the district.

He is a lawyer of fine legal attainments, of whom the late Chief Justice Smith used to say that no lawyer who appeared before the Supreme Court prepared and argued his cases more ably. He has kept up with his profession, is well versed in the statutes and familiar with the decisions of our courts. He is a learned and able lawyer, and so recognized by the bar of the district.

He is peculiarly qualified for the duties of the office, having an eminently judicial mind, firm, candid and impartial and a fairness that has long delighted his professional brethren. No attorney or suitor in any court presided over by him would ever have occasion to complain of unfairness or the exhibition of bad temper.

But above all this Mr. Allen is a man of the highest character. Scrupulously honest and honorable, no breath of suspicion has ever touched his reputation, and he has the perfect confidence of the community in which he lives, and of every one who knows him.

With Allen for judge, the people of the district could watch with satisfaction his career upon the bench, with the assurance that he would always conduct himself as becomes one found worthy to occupy that important and dignified position.

Railroad was never run with more satisfaction to the traveling public than has marked the present excellent administration."

A DAY OF REASON.

PREPARED BY JAMES H. SOUTHGATE, ESQ., OF DURHAM.

"Christian Culture and The University" Was the Inspiring Theme of His Sermon.

The following response was prepared for the alumni banquet at the University by James H. Southgate, of Durham, class of 1880. He was prevented by illness from attending. It is printed by special request of the committee. Mr. Southgate said:

In all the educational history from the beginning down there is no system of education nor any school of thought that comprehends the whole human nature so completely as the Gospel of Christ. There is not a single aspect of the human being from his origin to his ultimate destiny that this gospel does not embrace. Christianity is pre-eminently a race educator. It regards time and eternity as the field of development; in short it is a stupendous historical evolution of human character. No other system of philosophy gives man an equal place in the universe. Why then should an institution whose purpose it is to exalt humanity be based upon any other than the Christian idea of education? It is not the State for which we exist. In Christianity the man is more than the State; the State is only the scaffolding by which the temple of individual humanity is built. This institution does not exist as a means but as an end. It should seek to perfect the State. At the expense of the man, for that would be tyrannical. It should seek to perfect the individual man at whatever expense, for that is liberty, that is the liberty where-with the Christian conception of education sets man free. What in philosophy is so complete in theory? What in practice is so expansive in its application? Profound men assure us that the tendency of high education is necessarily atheistic. No institution nor individual can ignore the Christian idea of education and prove that the inevitable tendency is not atheistic. The great trunk line of human destiny must either bear us toward or away from God.

Christianity is a revelation of God and of man and the relation between the two. Blot out that sublime character—Jesus—whose life and history are at once the self revelation of both God and man, and the world is smitten with blindness, the sun is gone from its orbit; and what oracle is there left to tell us what we are, whence we came or where we are going? Can there, in all reason, be any other fate than atheism, pessimism or suicide for the race outside of the Christian conception of the development of character? It is Christianity or despair.

The capacity to apply the Christian conception of education is the measure of the power of any institution. If institutions are useful in spite of this conception they are so only by virtue of the reflex influences from association with christianized institutions and lives. The great heart of this policy must be thrilled with the Christian idea before the sciences and the arts can be brought into the liberty needed for their culture.

What is more despicable than a scientific bigotry protesting against the liberty which others use in matters of faith? There is absolutely no balance to scientific intolerance outside of the Christian conception of culture. There is no middle way between God and no God. The tendency of university or higher education is the tendency of the individuals that pursue it, and if other aims prepossess the policy of an institution, its officers and its students, then what can be the tendency of such an education? We plead not for the non-thinkers, the non-doable, but for what is demanded in this the beginning of the last decade of the nineteenth century, the two great characteristics of which are intensity of thought and intensity of action.

In government, in politics, in science, the mind of the philosopher is engaged as never before in trade, commerce and manufacture, the intensity of action and magnitude of achievements surpass the dream of the ages gone.

Religion does not escape investigation and critics are assailing the foundations of faith with theory and speculation; while men of action exhibit in their lives an utter defiance of Godliness that threatens society, government and civilization. Thought must therefore meet thought, action meet action. The energy and power of Christian philosophy in the lives of Christian men must prove the doctrine.

In this great contest of the age when faith and honorable living are antagonizing skepticism and vice, education must be the ally of Christianity, and Christianity the ally of education. The ideals of hand and head which have been so scrupulously followed during the past must become secondary to those of the heart. The demand is for a Christian culture as broad, deep and free as the "earth, air, ocean, sun moon and stars, that splendid alphabet struck off by the Almighty hand to teach us somewhat of His own eternal power and Godhead."

Secular rivalry and jealousy have stripped of much energy and power the already divided stronghold of faith; but the lost ground is being regained by liberal-minded and true-hearted workers, as by the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Peoples' Societies of Christian Endeavor and the Women's Missionary Societies. The world is being evangelized, non-essential dogmas to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Where, then, in North Carolina is the place for this broad moral culture? "Ex necessitate rei"—the University. Here let morality and Christianity dwell with literature and science, and let the little pride of sect be merged into the larger feeling of philanthropy and truth. The University must lead the way in the study of moral questions, practical moral culture, in broad Christian activity. Happy am I to be able to speak of her active and hearty work in this noble field.

Sir, it is a favored soil and climate which can furnish from forty to fifty men for the Christian ministry within a period of little more than a decade, and

THE MONROE REGISTER.

The Monroe Register is out in a strong column editorial endorsing David A. Covington for Congress in the 6th district.

The Troy Vidette is earnestly advocating Marmaduke S. Robbins, Esq., of Randolph, for Judge, to succeed Judge Armfield. It says:

He was in Troy this week, and has consented to be our candidate if it is the will of the majority of the Democrats of the district to thus honor him. His name on the ticket will add strength to it in this, Randolph, Davidson and Stanley counties, and in justice to this portion of the district we hope to see him receive the nomination.

Commenting on the Charlotte Chronicle's utterance (published in the STATE CHRONICLE last week) that Col. H. O. Jones was the only candidate from Mecklenburg who had announced himself, the Mecklenburg Times says:

Col. Jones is not only the first to publicly announce himself for Congress in Mecklenburg county, but the first in the whole district to do so. Indeed, we believe, it is not customary for Congressmen to publicly announce themselves for Congress in this district, although we by no means condemn a man for so doing.

Capt. Alexander has already secured the unanimous endorsement of Cabarrus county without advertising in the Charlotte Chronicle, and there is a slight impression abroad that he is in the field.

POLITICAL GOSSIP.

United States District Attorney C. A. Cook, of Warrenton, attended the reunion of his class—class of '70—at Princeton College last week.

Mr. J. C. Caddell, the clever traveling correspondent of the News and Observer, is at present engaged in taking the census in Wake Forest township.

Rev. M. H. Tuttle, of LaGrange, has been appointed to succeed Rev. W. S. Rone as pastor of the Kinston Methodist Church. Rev. G. G. Harley, of Fayetteville, a graduate of Wofford College, will succeed Mr. Tuttle at LaGrange.

Mrs. Anna McGilvray will take charge of the primary department in the Statesville College this fall. The Express congratulates Mrs. Walton, the principal of the college, upon securing the services of such an admirable teacher and so excellent a lady.—Sanford Express.

Mr. W. B. Glenn, the well-known Winston lawyer, is engaged in writing a book. It is a biography of the prominent lawyers of the State, and will be published in two large volumes. In searching the old records for data for use in the book he is writing, Mr. Glenn discovered that President Andrew Jackson was sworn in as a constable for one of the townships in Guilford county.—Greensboro Patriot.

Capt. W. T. R. Bell has this week been offered the presidency of Gainesville College. Gainesville is a flourishing and beautiful town with many attractions, and this offer is a very tempting one. But a prior engagement with the Butherfordton people forbids its acceptance, so he has declined the presidency and will, in September, be superintendent of the Butherford Military Institute.—Shelby Aurora.

Dry Goods Talk.

Space forbids a long procession of deep-cut prices made last night. 'Tis sufficient for us to say: If you visit our store to-morrow you will see a galaxy of lovely ZEPHY GINGHAM away under Metropolitan prices. Come give us your attention, and pass your criticism upon some fine Embroidered Flouncings at reduced Summer prices.
