A PLEA FOR HARMONY.

The people of the State are for SENATOR VANCE. The great majority of the Alliance desire his re-election, and will secure it. Many of them criticize his letter on the Sub-Treasury bill. They have a perfect right to criticize SENATOR VANCE for this position or his attitude upon any public question, and there ought to be no objection to just criticism. We are sure that SENATOR VANCE does not object to it, but rather welcomes all fair and just criticism.

SENATOR VANCE may be right about the Sub-Treasury bill. He may be wrong. Again, his position may not be understood. A prominent and thoughtful member of the Alliance writes us, in a private letter: "I think SENATOR VANCE's letter a good and able one. I think SENATOR VANCE is misrepresented when it is asserted that he opposes the Sub-Treasury plan without a qualification. He says that he is in favor of the principle and has fought for it for ten years, and that he stands ready to vote for it provided it be presented in shape as not to conflict with the Constitution."

Another prominent member of the Alliance, who holds an important official position, in a private letter, says: "I regret that SENATOR VANCE could not give his unqualified support to the Sub-Treasury bill. But his letter is an honest, manly one, and if he cannot consistently support it we do not expect him to do so. We believe that he will do what is best. He has been our friend in the past and we can trust him in the future. The recent editorial in the CHRONICLE entitled 'Our Greatest Man,' met with my hearty approval. I endorse every word therein. I thank you for it."

We could give a full column of such quotations from private letters from wise and strong Alliance men. In addition to such expressions, we have talked with quite a number of the leading Alliance men, and of the rank and file of the order, and while we find a feeling of regret that SENATOR VANCE did not unconditionally favor the Sub-Treasury plan, we find a confidence and affection in him that is indisputable evidence of the determination upon the part of the Alliance to return him to the Senate. There is no lack of criticism upon his letter, but in the main that criticism is a regretful spirit. There is not a farmer in the State who does not believe in SENATOR VANCE, and does not admit that he is the truest and ablest and best representative they ever had in the Senate. They say so always, and yet they claim the right to criticize his letter. Let them criticize it. Let any man criticize any act or expression of a public man. 'Faithful are the wounds of a friend.'

We have yet to see more than three farmers in the State who declare against the return of SENATOR VANCE, and we have talked with hundreds, and with men from all sections of the State. They are for him though not a few of them are resentful at the expressions sometimes used in regard to their criticism. There is no room for harsh criticisms or misrepresentations, and the CHRONICLE speaks with certainty when it says that, if his host of friends are discreet and zealous, SENATOR VANCE will certainly be re-elected. But his election cannot be advanced by any harsh denunciations or intemperate utterances.

We believe that these members of the Alliance who have opposed resolutions instructing for SENATOR VANCE, though doubtless inspired by an honest purpose to secure harmony, were not taking the wisest position. While many of them opposed such resolutions merely because they do not like the plan of giving instructions, their action is represented to be an opposition to the re-election of SENATOR VANCE. And it will not be easy to convince the thousands of VANCE men that such opposition to instructions is inimical to his interests. We believe that opposition to resolutions instructing for VANCE does not properly represent the position of the Alliance, and is calculated to make all outsiders believe the statement that there is organized opposition on the part of the Alliance toward Mr. VANCE. We are certain that there cannot be such organized opposition, because nearly every Democrat nominated or recommended for the Legislature is an Alliance man, and with the exception of a solitary county, all are instructed for VANCE.

If there was an organized opposition those nominated Alliance men could not be for VANCE, and yet there are no more enthusiastic VANCE men than most of them.

The CHRONICLE has observed with genuine regret the opposition to instructing for VANCE that has developed in some counties. We think that those Alliance men who oppose it are making a mistake. We do not doubt their honesty or their Democracy. We merely doubt their judgment in this instance. We desire harmony. We want to see the Democracy present an unbroken front to the enemy, and elect all the members of the General Assembly in close counties as well as in those which give big majorities. Quite a number of counties have instructed for VANCE, and such old members as JOHN B. HOLMAN, of Iredell; ABEL HUITT, of Catawba; NATHAN BASS, of Wilson, and others, who are earnest Alliance men, are nominated and instructed for VANCE, and they will support him enthusiastically. Every day some county follows in the same line. If there comes serious divisions here, there is danger.

If the issue had not already been raised the CHRONICLE would not have raised it because we are confident of the return of SENATOR VANCE as of the fact that the Democrats will win the election. But it has been raised by criticisms which we deemed harsh and unjust upon SENATOR VANCE, and by the discussion which has followed. The counties and district conventions have taken it up, and with a single exception, all have endorsed SENATOR VANCE. We believe that, in view of this agitation of the question, the best way to secure harmony and success is for every Democratic Alliance man to follow the example of a very level-headed one who, in private conversation, the other day, said to us:

"I do not like VANCE's letter, and if I see him I will tell him so. But I favor his re-election because he has shown by a public record of a quarter of a century his devotion to the people, and has done more for them than any hundred other men. I am for him, but I claim the right to criticize him whenever I do not think he is right as to a particular measure. He is always with the farmers, and they, of all classes, cannot join hands with his enemies to defeat him."

These are wise and patriotic sentiments, and the CHRONICLE commends them to every Alliance man in North Carolina.

We believe it best for the nominees to the Legislature to be instructed for Senator because it eliminates a question from the campaign which threatens division and discord. Suppose that a candidate is nominated who does not agree with SENATOR VANCE upon the Sub-Treasury, and many such men will be nominated. In fact nine-tenths of the Democratic members of the Legislature will be Alliance men or those in sympathy with the principles of the Alliance. When he goes out before the people, everybody will ask him where he stands as to VANCE. There is no evading the question now, after so much has been said about it. He will be compelled to answer, and he will be in danger of defeat whatever may be his reply. But, suppose the convention that nominates him instructs for VANCE, he can say: "I am instructed to vote for SENATOR VANCE, and I shall vote for him. I do not agree with him upon the Sub-Treasury bill, (or upon some other measure, about which there is difference), but when I am elected, if, after consultation, it is deemed wise, and if my constituents desire it, I will introduce a resolution in the General Assembly instructing him to vote for that bill. There is certain to be a majority of Alliance men in the Legislature. In North Carolina our Senators have recognized the right of Legislatures to instruct them upon public measures; for example, upon the Blair bill, upon the Internal Revenue and other matters, and they have always obeyed. I believe SENATOR VANCE will do what the Legislature instructs him to do."

We believe that such a position would harmonize every difference in the party in every county of the State, and secure to the nominee for the Legislature the enthusiastic support of all Democrats. We are certain that it would give substantially all that is desired and promote such harmony as would carry the State for the Democrats by an overwhelming majority. We commend the consideration of this compromise, which we suggest, without consultation with either SENATOR VANCE's friends, or his critics, to all parties. We believe that it will meet the approval of the conservative and patriotic people of the State, both in and out of the Alliance, and so believing we have offered it as an olive-branch of peace, and as a solution to the honest differences that exist between Democrats.

We believe that unless there is perfect accord and concert of action upon the part of all our people, there is grave danger that the Legislature desired will be defeated because the Legislature will be very close or Republican, and from a Republican Legislature all good Democrats, whether Alliance men or not, will devoutly pray, "Good Lord, deliver us!" The passage of a Railroad Commission is the leading State question upon which there is agitation. SENATOR VANCE and the Alliance are together in believing that the establishment of this commission would be fraught with good to the commonwealth. The opponents of this measure will not be idle. They controlled the last State Senate, and unless the people are alert and united they will control the next Senate. If, upon questions where there is substantial agreement and only differences as to details, the people lose sight of this important legislation, it will be defeated. The editor of the CHRONICLE has fought for the establishment of a commission for ten years. Twice has everybody expected its passage, but both times the measure failed. It will fail again if its advocates devote their attention to questions upon which there is an easy way to secure a compromise, and pay little or no attention to the question until the closing days of the Legislature. Without harmony and united action we cannot secure this or other important State legislation. With harmony, we can make the complexion of the next Legislature such that all needed State legislation can be secured.
