MY FRIEND--A WORD WITH YOU.

Do you know that every man who desires to vote at this election must register anew? Even if you have registered and voted before, you must register again under the new Election Law to vote this year.

Do you want the Republicans to carry the election and have your neighbors arrested and put in jail as in 1889? If not, REGISTER and VOTE THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

Do you wish the negro to get control of your county and State? If not, REGISTER and VOTE for the DEMOCRATIC NOMINEES.

Do you not know that EVERY NEGRO in the State will REGISTER and VOTE? Then so must every WHITE MAN.

Do you want negro Yankee soldiers with drawn bayonets to meet you at the polls and dictate to you how to vote? If not, be sure your name is on the registration books, and do not fail to vote the straight Democratic ticket.

You can't register after Oct. 24th--so REGISTER at ONCE. Don't say you have not time--take time--YOUR HAPPINESS depends on it; the GOOD NAME and PROSPERITY OF YOUR STATE DEPENDS ON IT; HONEST GOVERNMENT and WHITE MAN'S CONTROL DEPENDS ON IT. DON'T WAIT. Delay may cost the defeat of the party.

A SOUTHERNER HONORED.

COL. JOHN R. FELLOWS has been nominated for Congress in the Sixth District of New York. He is the present District Attorney of New York City, and is a learned lawyer and able statesman. He was a gallant Confederate soldier, and New York is the only city on the continent where his gallantry in that war would not have stood in the way of his promotion. New York Democrats do not ask "where were you born?" or "what have you been doing?" but "what can you do?" and "what do you believe in?"

New York Democracy lives in the present, and the nomination of COL. FELLOWS and the appointment of ROGER A. PYBOR shows that BRAINS and not LOCALITY OF BIRTH have weight with them.

THE CHRONICLE ENDORSED.

"There would be some hope for the Republicans," said a Radical yesterday, "if it were not for the d--n STATE CHRONICLE."

THERE can be no division among white men in North Carolina so long as we are surrounded by a solid wall of negro voters. If the negroes would only lay aside their prejudices and divide their votes, then the white men might afford to differ. But they cannot afford to divide in North Carolina under present conditions.--E. O. BEDDINGFIELD in State Convention of Democratic Clubs.

JUSTICE MILLER.

The death of Associate Justice MILLER, of the United States Supreme Court, removes a conspicuous figure from public life. He had served on the bench for three decades, receiving his appointment in 1862 from ABRAHAM LINCOLN. He had been a lawyer pure and simple, and when appointed to the bench had never held any other office. He was a native of Kentucky and passed his boyhood on the farm. He studied medicine and practiced until he was thirty years old, when he read law because he became convinced that medicine was not his true vocation, and that the natural bent of his mind leaned towards the law. Nothing daunted at his age he began the study of the law with a wonderful steadfastness of purpose and such natural talent that he was admitted to the Bar in 1847, or a little over a year after he had determined to become a lawyer. Mr. MILLER found time from his study and practice of law to take an active interest in public affairs. He was an ardent admirer of HENRY CLAY to the day of his death and regarded CLAY as the foremost statesman America has produced.

Among the notable judgments delivered by him may be mentioned that of the slaughter house case in 1872, which defined the limit between a citizen's personal rights and the legislative power of a State; that of the Kilbourn case, which dealt with the right of Congress to punish an individual citizen, and several opinions on the legal tender cases, interstate railroad traffic, and other subjects of the first importance. On the lines that divide the authority of the State from that of the federal government, and on the prerogatives of the various branches of the government itself--executive, legislative and judicial--he was recognized as one of the greatest living authorities. His opinions were always noted for the clearness, exactness and independence of his views.

The mother of JUSTICE MILLER was MISS MARTHA FREEMAN who was a native of North Carolina.

ONE BY ONE THEY FALL.

There is retribution in this world as well as the next. Mrs. STEPHAN in New York put $5,000 in the hands of MILTON S. LITTLEFIELD to use in securing her son's release. Her son was not released and LITTLEFIELD was arrested for grand larceny. He is the same LITTLEFIELD who helped despoil North Carolina during the Reconstruction period, and who made the Capitol a place of his debauchery and the debauchery of ignorant negroes. Retribution has come to him and his sin has found him out. We take no delight in any man's downfall, but when a scoundrel is apprehended and brought to justice it is but right that he should suffer.

HOW ONE MAN REDEEMED HIMSELF.

Father and Mother Had Both Been in the Penitentiary, But Both are Reformed and Useful Members of Society.

A friend of the Salem, N. C. Press, who was lately at Sparta, Alleghany county, says that while there he visited the jail and found it empty. The jailer, after showing him around, introduced his family, among whom were two bright faced children, a girl and a boy. The boy was named after Gov. Seales, and the father remarked that the governor was the best friend he ever had, explaining to the surprise of his guest that he had pardoned him from the penitentiary, where he had been sentenced for 30 years for man slaughter, after a service of 7 years and 7 months, and exhibited his highly prized pardon.

The most interesting part of the story is that Mrs. Holloway, the jailer's wife, was also in the penitentiary for one year for alleged assistance in the escape of some prisoners in Swain county. She met Mr. Holloway in the penitentiary and it was a case of love at first sight, and as soon as released they were married.

He follows the trade of a shoemaker, which he learned in the penitentiary. Since his pardon Mr. Holloway has held the offices of constable and United States marshal, and is now the jailer of Alleghany county, respected by all who know him.

A DUEL TO THE DEATH.

Two Negro Barbers in Lexington Empty their Revolvers at Each Other.

(Special Charlotte Chronicle.) LEXINGTON, N. C., Oct. 11, 1890.--We had a shooting match in our town this morning between two of our colored aristocratic barbers. John McRary, colored, shot Osker Barringer and mortally wounded him. The shooting was mutual, both parties engaging in it until their pistols were emptied; but McRary was not hit and made good his escape.

Barringer has three distinct bullet holes in his body; and it is thought he will die. The trouble occurred about McRary's wife. McRary accused Barringer of being too intimate with her and wrote him a note that if he did not leave the State in twenty four hours, he would kill him. The time expired this morning, and Barringer was still here, when McRary, true to his word went to his shop and shot him.

Ran Away With the Circus.

(Kinston Free Press.) Sam Faulkner, son of Mrs. Rebecca Faulkner, who lives about five miles from Kinston, ran away with the circus last Thursday. Mr. J. E. Dupree went to Wilmington Monday after him, but the circus people told him that Sam had left and they supposed was on his way home.

Mr. Dupree says that the circus lost money at Wilmington, the attendance being almost nothing because of Sam Jones' meetings.

UNIVERSITY DAY.

Prof. Jas. Y. Joyner, delivers the address--Edgar Allan Poe is the theme.

(Special Cor. STATE CHRONICLE.) CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Oct. 13, 1890.--The 12th of October coming on Sunday, this year, University day was celebrated this morning.

In accordance with the custom begun in 1793, the exercises were opened with prayer, Dr. Hume, of the Faculty, officiating. The University ode, composed by Mrs. C. P. Spencer, was sung to the air of "God Save the Queen."

The orator of the day, Mr. J. Y. Joyner, principal of the Goldsboro graded schools, was then introduced by Dr. Kemp P. Battle, who called the class-roll of 1881, (of which Mr. Joyner was a member) giving a short sketch of the life of each since leaving the University.

The subject of Mr. Joyner's address was "The Life and Character of Edgar Allan Poe." He reviewed his early life. When just a child he memorized many verses, and recited them well. He attended the University of Virginia, and afterwards West Point. His time at the former, in spite of adverse critics, was used moderately well, but he was cashiered at the latter. Before this he had made some reputation as a poet, and he continued to pursue a literary life in Baltimore and Richmond, with varied success.

After marriage with his cousin, Virginia Clemm, there came a gleam of happiness, only to be blasted by the ravages of consumption.

From day to day for ten wretched years he watched her life ebb away, and as the flow became weaker and weaker, his wretchedness became greater and greater. For twelve months after her death, in despairing madness, in despondent misery, in unutterable woe, he mourned for his lost Lenore. Beyond this is melancholy and anguish, over which we must draw the mantle of charity and pity. While he endeavors to drown the demon, which struggles with the angel in his bosom, leave him alone. Let us turn sadly away from his pitiful moans for Annabel Lee, or his fruitless endeavors to escape from himself to the great lesson taught by his life: "Educate the heart and head together." The great Brooklyn orator has said "educate the brain alone, you have a skeptic; educate the heart alone, you have a fanatic; educate the two together, you have the noblest work of God."

His life was a failure and a tragedy, because his mind alone was educated.

Had there been a kind mother to kiss his brow, smooth his pillow, and teach him that love which "passeth understanding," it might have been a different life.

The black wings of his melancholy bird, flitting his fame from sea to sea, have secured his immortality, but who will say his life was what the Southerner would wish for the greatest poet of his land?

A miserly man after accumulating great wealth, began to dream of immortality. His eye shone with a strange lustre; his heart beat with a peculiar warmth; his mind received a new impulse. Could he live in the thoughts of fellows when the pitiless grave claimed his body?

He erected a monument, but he saw it fade under the ruthless touch of time. He inscribed his name on the granite side of a neighboring mountain, but he saw the makings become fainter and fainter day by day. He met a lovely child crying for bread to feed a famishing parent, dying on a bed of sickness. He filled its outstretched hand with coin, and it said, "Sir, if my great father spares me a thousand years, I will remember you and your act." With tears the old man said to himself: "Ah! I've found the secret path of immortality. Let me do some act that will remain engraven on the hearts of my fellow men."

The address was well written, well delivered, and highly appreciated.

A WEDDING THAT DIDN'T OCCUR.

(Greensboro Patriot.) An Expectant Bridegroom Sadly Disappointed.

Yesterday morning Mr. Adam Ryles, an expectant bridegroom of fifty summers, got into his best suit of clothes and taking Miss Lizzie Lewis, a maiden lady of forty summers in his buggy, drove to this city to get the "faded noose adjusted" or in other words, to get married. On reaching the city the lady said she had some shopping to do before the ceremony was performed and would marry him at 3 o'clock p. m. Mr. Ryles consented and treated his lady love to a fine dinner, and otherwise did all he could to make her comfortable. At 3 o'clock Mr. Ryles was on hand, but the lady again objected to marrying him just then. A rather spirited discussion took place between them during which the lady remarked "she did not come to town to marry but to get a new dress." This was the last straw and Mr. Ryles indignantly ordered Miss Lewis to get in the buggy, and he would take her to a friends house near the city and leave her, and she could make her way home the best she could, but on reaching the house she refused to get out, and told him he had to take her home. When last seen they were homeward bound, and their conversation was not of a very amiable character.

THE SUCCESS OF THE Provident Savings Life Assurance SOCIETY

NEW YORK

Is attracting wide attention, for the following reasons:

1st. The increase in the amount of new Insurance in 1889 was 66 per cent. over that of the previous year.

2d. New business in 1889 nearly twenty millions of dollars.

3d. The ratios of payments for Death Claims and Expenses to amount at Risk are LOWER than those of the oldest and largest Life Insurance Companies of New York; and the Ratios of Assets to Liabilities in the Provident Savings Life are LARGER, being $205 for every $100 of Liabilities, while in the three largest of the New York Companies the Ratios are as $127, $118 and $108 to every $100 of their Liabilities.

4th. Life Insurance at ACTUAL COST, that brings insurance within the reach of many heretofore unable to carry it.

5th. It never costs one-half the price charged for it in "Best Old Style Life Companies," whose experience proves that hardly 39 per cent. of their Premium Receipts were necessary to insure the lives of their Policy-holders; while the balance was used

FOR SOMETHING ELSE besides insurance.

6th. Past experience shows that the better the plans of the Society are known, the greater its income becomes.

To know what these plans are, call at the Company's office in Greensboro, N. C., or on any of my Agents in the State.
