THE Economist-Falcon asks if A A. Thompson, Esq., President of the Commercial and Industrial Association, had overlooked Elizabeth City. We suppose not. All that necessary is for the Mayor of that city to appoint representatives, as has been done in other places where there is no Board of Trade, or other similar business organization.

THE mountain fires in the far west have proved more destructive even than the waters of the Mississippi which, breaking through populous region near New Orleans. The accounts of the occurrences last Sunday found in our telegraphic columns are exciting enough. Whole towns were devoured by the insatiate flames, and men, women and children had to flee for their

THE work of firemen is full of peril, and although by their skill unharmed, yet sometimes less of life is the penalty paid for their daring. It is because their devotion to duty leads them to brave danger, and to put themselves in jeopardy for the benefit of others and of their towns, that their services receive such merited recognition. The fire departments are usually the pets of their respective communities.

The other day when Wilmington had the misfortune to have one of her best young men, one who was most active in business as well as among the most faithful of her firemen, a bright man, of education, intelligence, high character, and social connections, stricken down while bravely performing a hazardous service, the city paid him only proper respect by tendering to his bereaved family a public funeral. The mournful occasion was a notable one, and it was one of the largest fanerals ever held in that city. It was a fitting tribute to a gallant gentleman, who fell in the performance of a patriotic duty even as Wyatt fell in the battle of THE Bank of New Hanover, at Wilmington, whose stock has been quoted all along at 140, Las been forced to the wall by its depositors, at a moment when it could not pro cure cash for its assets, and the bank closed yesterday morning. This matter is to be very much regretted. The depositors will receive every cent of their money, and we suppose, from the value of the stock, that the stockholders may get a surplus over the par value of their stock. But in the meantime the business of the town of Wilmington will be seriously interfered with and, if found available, will be used with The business of Wilmington is however, largely local, and the inconvenience will be local. It will not affect other towns of the State very much. For many years the bank at Goldsboro was a branch of the bank just closed, but more than a year ago, separation was made, and the Goldsboro bank became a distinct institution standing on its own bottom, and entirely disconnected from the one at Wilmington.

We are pleased to know that the failure does not hurt our Raleigh banks, none of them having any money in the Wilmington bank. It is to be deplored that the depositors should have wrecked an institution which doubtless would have been of great use to the people, in these times, if the people had the levees, have inundated a rich and not wrecked it. While in the end not a cent will be lost by any one, yet the business of Wilmington will be greatly hurt by the trouble.

The Strongest Man in the World.

New York Herald. Perhaps the strongest man whom the world has seen since Samson destroyed himself along with three thousand Philistines is in New York just now. He is not slaying thousands with the jawbone of an ass, carrying off ponderous gates like those of Gaza on his shoulders, nor pulling down stone houses on himself and others, but he is doing feats in lifting dumb-bells, men and horses that make cold chills chase one another up and down the spine of the beholder.

Ernest Sandow this modern marvel of physical power beside whom the average man is puny, made his American debut in the Casino before a private gathering of about two hundred persons, many of whom were medical men, last Sunday. It was hard for the spectators when a calcium light was turned on the figure standing on a pedestal in the back of the darkened stage to believe that it was indeed flesh and blood that they beheld. Such knots and bunches and layers of muscle they had never before seen off the statue of an Achilles, a Discabolus or a fighting gladiator.

SANDOW'S BOYISH FACE

The face was that of little more than a boy-smooth, with rosy cheeks and a little blond mustache. The chin, however, was square and heavy. The neck was massive, and the shoulders seemed a yard apart. The arm looked as though hickory nuts and walnuts had somehow been forced under the skin, causing it to bulge out in abrupt lumps Layers of muscles three inches thick covered the chest, and on the abdomen was a succession of rolls of muscle that one could tell even from a distance of several yards were hard as iron.

Below the waist the development was no less remarkable. The thighs were "big around as beer kegs, some one said, and the calves were in proportion. The ankle and foot however, were comparatively small.

"See how his ribs show!" heard a physician who sat near me exclaim, as Sandow suddenly changed his position and fiexed the muscles of the upper part of the body room after his performance last Tuesday night. The ridges that stood out so plainly were of muscle and not of bone. "They are rudimentary in most men and they don't know how to develop them Sundow said. "That is the reason they are so in frequently seen."

OPINION OF AN EXPERT.

The physician who made the remark about Sandow's "ribs" was Dr. Ramon Guiteras. The Doctor was formerly much interested in athletics. He is a member of the New York Athletic Club, and enjoys with "Charley" Mithell and "Jim" Cor- the present administration. bett the proud distinction of having knocked down Mr. John Sullivan. That was before Sullivan became a professional.

asked the Doctor what he thought about Sandow. "Sandow," said he, "is about the most perfectly developed specimen seen athletes with bigger muscles than he, but never one with the all round development Sandow pos-"There is nothing abnormal in his development. The nearest approach to a deformity, if a natural muscular development may be termed a deformity, is in the abdominal muscles. The like of these I have never before seen on a human being.

The feats which he performs are so far as one could judge, were genuine. The three horses he supports, to be sure, are not of large size, but together, nevertheless, they make up a weight that would crush the life out of an ordinary athlete. GETTING STRONGER EVERY YEAR

Sandow says he is getting stronger every year and expects to keep increasing in strength for years to come. Before he gives up professional work, he says, he intends to write a book explaining his system. He will also give personal instructions to those who want to become

The feats which Sandow performs on the stage seem nothing less than marvellous. He handles fifty-six pound dumb-bells as a schoolboy would handle weights of two pounds each. He is not in the least musclebound and turns somersaults and handsprings with the ease of a professional acrobat. One of his tricks is to turn a back somersault with his feet tied together, his eyes blindfolded and a fifty-six pound dumbell in each hand.

In his nightly performance at the Casino four men carry on the stage an immense dumb bell, the bar of which is brass about four feet long and the bells, which are hollow, three feet in diameter. With great effort Sandow raises the bell over his his head with one arm, then dropping it suddenly, catches it with both hands and places it lightly on the floor, whereupon the attendants release a man from each bell. The total weight of the apparats and men is about three hundred and twenty pounds. HOLDING UP THREE HORSES Another feat is that of supporting with his arms and legs the weight of three horses. Sandow rests on his hands and feet with his back toward the floor. A heavy wooden platform is then placed on him, resting on his shoulders, chest structed to fit about the neck to pre-

A long wooden bridge is then placed across the platform, and three trained horses walk upon the bridge. They remain there for about five seconds, while every muscle of the giant underneath stands out like whipcord. The weight of the animals and apparatus is said to be 2,600 pounds.

Sandow is under contract Henry E. Abbey. He will remain it this city as long as Mr. Abbey sees fit, and will then go to Chicago.

The Federal Offices. Communicated.

A very grave responsibility rests apon the eleven gentlemen who, by eustom, control the distribution of the Federal patronage belonging to this State. I say by custom, for there is no law or party regulation that gives it to them, but a usage of the Departments at Washington rendered necessary by the very na ture of the case. Applicants are always numerous and unknown to the heads of the Departments, and it is natural that they should look to the Senators and members to say who should fill the positions. The custom is all right and satisfactory to the people, but they watch carefully whom these gentlemen select. The dominant party, which is now the Democratic, is vitally interested, and while probably ninetyfive per cent of them want no office, it is a mistake to suppose they are not deeply interested as to who are

The 140,000 Democrats in this State, who voted for Elias Carr last November, ask these gentlemen to discard all personal interests that conflict with the selection of the most worthy, active and working Democrats. No man should be selected who gave grounds for the suspicion that he was hobnobbing with the Third party, who joined Gideon's band, and left it on the payment of his thirty pieces of silver, who demanded a promise of office and his campaign expenses before he would enlist in the cause: who is a carpet-bagger of too recent importation to have earned such reward; who was conspicuous at conventions and public speakings, but absent when the battle was on. and who did not pull off his coat and work for that success that has placed the offices at the disposal of the fair was but a trifle compared our party. SUNDAY OPENERS WIN THE DE-

Justice Fuller Applauded. New York Herald.

CHICAGO, June 17 .- The fair will be open on Sunday hereafter, as the United States Court of Appeals has reversed the decision of the Circuit Court. Nothing can be done with the United States Supreme Court, as that body does not sit until October, and the only hopes of the Sunday closers is in the Wanamaker suit on behalf of the stockholders asking that an injunction be issued to close the fair. In the decision given today the Court of Appeals find that it had jurisdiction in the case, that the United States has no such equity in the premises as to entitle it to the relief originally prayed for; that the local corporation by reasons of its greater financial interest in the fair has an equity surpassing that of the United States.

IN ACCORD ON EVERY POINT. Chief Justice Fuller and his associates on the Bench were in accord on every point. The decision, which was written and read by Chief Justice Fuller, was brief. He prefaced the decision proper with the statement that owning to the desire to have the case passed upon as soon as possible the court has decided to announce briefly its conclusions, leaving a more complete exposition of the reasons for the decision to be made later. Counsel for the government had contended that the Court of Appeals had no jurisdiction in the case. The justices decided they had full authority in the premises. The government's motion to dismiss the appeal on this ground was overruled. The government's contention that the World's Fair people had violated the contract implied in the act of Congress of March 3, 1893, was met by the Court with the judicial enunciation that the government, by withholding the $570,000 souvenir coins, had disregarded its covenant with the fair.

The decision pointed out that the government's money investment in were coequal with those of the goverament and should be considered and conserved by a court of equity.

Finally the decision held that it had not been shown that the government could suffer any loss or damage by the opening of the fair on Sanday, and for this reason the government could have no right or claim in equity to .the relief prayed

The judgment of the lower court was reversed and the case remanded. When the Chief Justice had finished the court room rang with applause, which the Marshal did not endeavor to suppress. It was evident the decision was to the taste of the great majority in the room.

Justice Fuller did not reprove those who applauded. This action of the Court of Appeals leaves the status of the local directory where it was before the action by the government was taken. The rule made by the directory and approved by the National Commission opening tne fair on Sunday is now in full perative force. No further action can be taken by the government till after the final hearing of the case, and entering of the decree in the lower court, when the government, if it so elect, can appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States As the case must take its place on the calendar of the Circuit Court the fair will be over long before the cause comes on for hearing. The court room never had such a crowd of people before. Not only were the chairs and wooden seats usually in use occupied, but every inch of standing room was utilized. The aisles were packed with interested auditors. Men climbed on the window sills, and stood in sil-The space around and back of the was invaded by the crowd, which clambered on benches and pushed its way into all corners and points whence the Chief Justice could be
