$60,000 WANTED.

In December, 1872, the Grand Lodge of Masons ordered the opening of an Practices in the Federal and State asylum at Oxford, for the protection, training and education of indigent and promising orphans. Several weeks were occupied with necessary preparations, and, in February, 1873, the work began. Some foresaw nothing but failure, and predicted that spontaneous donations would not sustain such an institution. Others determined that so far as its success depended on them, their whole duty should be performed. Lodges, churches, benevolent societies and liberal individuals have supported it by their voluntary contributions, and many helpless and hopeless orphans have been placed where wholesome food, comfortable clothing and faithful instruction will make them intelligent and useful citizens. The laws of the land afford but little protection to or- 513 7th St., Opposite U. S. P. O. Dept., phans and the hard hand of avarice often holds them in sad and shameful slavery. Legislators disregard their appeals, Orphans cannot vote, their fathers are all dead and the rich seldom espouse the cause of their poor relations. Careful issues, Interferences, and Infringeobservation has shown that, by close economy, each orphan may be fed, clothed and taught for five dollars a month. In order that different sections of the State may be represented, and that the most urgent and most needy applicants may be admitted, about two hundred orphans should be kept in the asylum. Their expenses will amount to twelve thousand dellars a year. To insure the permanence of the institution and the continuance of its work, there ought to be some provision for its support for at least five years. If sixty lodges, churches, benevolent societies or individuals will each pay one hundred dollars every year for five years; if seventy lodges, churches, benevolent societies or individuals will each pay 26-tf fifty dollars every year for five years; and if one hundred lodges churches, benevolent societies or individuals will each pay twenty-five dollars every year for five years, the people will then appreciate the value of the work and in some way make it permanent. Thus, for food, clothing and instruction, twelve thousand dollars a year may be raised and smaller contributions will supply furniture and fixtures. Will the friends of orphans raise this amount? The question is now before them.

Direct contributions are earnestly solicited. No countenance should be given to those who wish to grind their axes at the expenses of the orphans, neither should public attention be diverted by new schemes for raising money out of others. When people feel for orphans they should feel in their own pockets and contribute as the Lord has prespered them. Contributions for this year and pledges for future years should be sent to the Superintendent, at Oxford. JOHN NICHOLS,

Grand Master. J. H. MILLS, Superintenden: Orphan Asylum. feb 22-tf.
