TELEPHONE, 168
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1895.

The visit of President Cleveland focused the attention of the world upon Atlanta and her great Expon-sition. The President like all other visitors, was surprised at the magnitude of the fair. He spent some time looking at the exhibits and seemed to enjoy the trip with great zeal. Parades and great crowds are not new to him, but this wonderful display of the resources of the South he characterized as a marvel of real reconstruction. He was naturally interested in the government exhibits and spent some time there. It is claimed by the government board of the jury of awards that this exhibit is superior to any the government has made elsewhere.

PROGRESS IN THE SOUTH.

There are some very instructive and interesting facts in the following from the Boston Herald, which we are glad to note, does not like its neighbor, the Globe, confine its observations and its circulation to the New England States alone. The Herald says:

The South is a very large expression and progress in the South indicates a movement distributed over many States not at all alike, either in natural advantages or lately acquired enterprise. Some parts of the South are still very backward, while others have made advances of late years which it would be difficult to find equalled in any other section of the country. People have become familiar with the rapidly increasing production of the great agricultural staple of the South. Between 1880 and 1895 the crop kept within 6,000,- 000 of bales, by 1895 it was 6,500,000, and by 1898 close on 7,000,000. The maximum was thought to have been reached when the crop of 1890 exceeded 7,300,000 bales, but that was thrown into the shade when the extraordinary crop of last year showed a total of nearly 9,500,000 bales. The present year's crop will be very far short of this in quantity, though, thanks to the advanced price, its value may be as great. In the natural order of things, the crop of 1894 will not stand long without a rival.
When Texas grows more cotton than all the Southern States did before the war, and she is still at the beginning of her agricultural development, the cotton-producing possibilities of the South are very far from being exhausted.

Side by side with the growth of what used to be the only source of Southern wealth there have been growing up a more diversified agriculture and the beginnings of a wide range of manufactures. It is characteristic of the new spirit of the South that the cottonseed oil industry is the growth of the period since the war. A product which was reckoned useless in 1860 figured in 1890 as having a value, after treatment in the mills, of $28,834,000, and in today the basis of an investment in buildings and machinery of $30,000,000.

In 1890 the whole South produced only 148,000,000 bushels of grain; last year the yield was 600,000,000. The number of tons of coal mined in 1880 was but little over 6,000,000, while in 1894 it was 30,000,000. The output of pig iron in the South in 1880 was 397,390 tons, and in 1894, 1,500,000 tons. The value of the product of sawed and planed lumber, which in 1880 was $40,938,000, had risen in 1894 to $114,746,974. The true value of southern property, according to the census returns of 1890, was $7,- 641,000,000; last year, it was estimated at $7,000,000,000.

There is today some $800,000 invested in manufacturing enterprises in the South, with an estimated annual value of product of $1,000,000, 000. Of the former, about $108,000, 000 is invested in cotton mills, or five times as much as in 1880, and some $98,000,000 is invested in lumber mills. A recent writer on the South remarked that with the possession of all the raw materials entering into manufactures, with cheap labor and cost of living, the industrial future of the South should be of the brightest. But the fact that these resources remained so long undeveloped and are now coming so fully into evidence, argues a change in the spirit of the people more significant than the inexhaustible bounty of nature. No one at all familiar with the old South can fail to be struck with the resolution with which the men whom the war left peniless set themselves to repair their wasted fortunes.
