THE SITUATION IN COTTON.

The New Orleans Picayune in the course of a very sensible and conservative editorial upon the cotton situation says:

The future of prices has narrowed down to a test of endurance between the cotton consumer in this country and Europe on the one hand, and their representatives on the other.

On the surface, Manchester trade appears bad; but the official British Board of Trade returns tell a different story, so that it may safely be accepted as a fact that Manchester is doing a much better business than appears upon the surface.

The activity among the American mills is too apparent to be doubted for a moment. It may, therefore, be assumed that, notwithstanding the figures of the visible supply, the present consumption of cotton is so live and that the invisible stocks are being eaten into to a very liberal extent.

Despite the apparent holding back of cotton at the interior towns, there is a growing belief that the crop is very nearly as short as the "official estimators" have predicted.

If the planters and merchants in the interior, who are in a better position to be fully conversant with the actual facts, did not believe that the crop was very short they would never hold with the confidence that they are now showing.

All things considered, the Picayune believes that there will soon be a considerable revival of the demand for actual cotton, as at the price which the market has now reached the staple cannot fail to prove attractive to spinners.

The only obstacle in the way of a brisk demand now is the war scare in Europe, and, as soon as that passes away, as it doubtless will in a few days, we are likely to witness a very brisk demand for cotton.

A crop anywhere in the neighborhood of 7,000,000 bales, and the trade generally puts the figures much lower than that, should sell readily at about present prices.

The weak long interest which has remained over since the panic has now been about liquidated, and the only pressure the market has to meet is the manipulation being engineered from New York, a factor likely to receive serious discouragement from the light movement which the next few weeks will develop.

A complete and immediate revolution of transportation methods, involving a reduction of freight charges on grain from the West to New York of from 50 to 60 per cent., is what is predicted in the November Cosmopolitan.

The plan proposes using light and inexpensive corrugated iron cylinders, hung on a slight rail supported on poles from a cross-arm—the whole system involving an expense of not more than fifteen hundred dollars a mile for construction.

The rolling stock is equally simple and comparatively inexpensive. Continuous lines of cylinders, moving with no interval to speak of, would carry more grain in a day than a quadruple track rail way. This would constitute a sort of grain-pipe line. The Cosmopolitan also points out the probable abolition of street-cars before the coming horseless carriage, which can be operated by a boy on asphalt pavements at a total expense for labor, oil, and interest, of not more than one dollar a day.

The plowman who directed the tired horse through the narrow furrows is a figure that disappeared on the large farms in the West some time ago, the steam plow having come largely into use.

The change was an improvement, and the work was done far more quickly, yet it was recognized that the steam plow was a cumbersome machine and there was found not a little difficulty in operating it on account of the necessity of fuel and steam supplies for the engine.

Now comes the electric plow, which has just been introduced in Germany, and, according to report, works admirably. A motor is connected with it, working by wires attached to a dynamo, and the machinery is a little complicated, but the general result is satisfactory, and upon farms of great size the new invention is expected to do an immense amount of work at a great saving of money.

This system, if widely employed, will take away from the horse another of his old-time duties, and leads to fresh wonder as to what will become of him when machinery is substituted for his services altogether.
