

A LONG JOURNEY.

A Connecticut Farmer Travels From His Native State to North Carolina.

The Salisbury World says: "In the baggage car of the western train this morning lay a dilapidated, brot en up bicycle. In the rear end of the first-class coach sat a dilapidated looking little man and he was the owner of the "bike." He had travelled all the way from Bridgeport, Connecticut, to this city chiefly on his wheel. His name is Charles Turner, and he left Bridgeport on the 5th day of February. From New York he rode to Norfolk on the train. From there he rode to Southern Pines and from Southern Pines here. He left on the western train for Asheville, where he will probably locate. Mr. Turner is a Connecticut farmer and a plain looking man about 50 years old. He has had several quite exciting experiences, having been locked up three times, the first time in his native state on the charge of stealing a bicycle. He has visited all sections of the country and is an exceedingly interesting conversationalist.

Ticket Agents Galore.

Charlotte Observer.

Attached to No. 36, the Florida special, yesterday morning, were two sleepers in which were about 150 ticket agents from the north and East. They were returning to Washington from Antonio, Tex., where they had been to attend the National Association of ticket agents. They took in Mexico as a side trip. The party breakfasted at Graham's. Manager Sanders gave them the best breakfast, they said they had had, since leaving New Orleans. One of the party sent the Observer a pretty pin, a souvenir of the trip.

Railroad Extension in North Carolina.

The Washington Post says W J Hillards, a successful Ohio promoter, now in that city, is engaged in negotiations with an English syndicate of capitalists for the purpose of building a 350 mile extension of the Atlantic and North Carolina railway to Sanford and Concord, N. C. The proposed extension would open up over 3,000,000 feet of timber resources. Bonds to the amount of $3,500,000 will be issued to carry the project through.

May be necessary in many ways when dollars are scarce and waste many, but it is not desirable to practice it in the purchase of food, which is life.
