NOTICE.

. The proprietors of the Visitor are always anxious and willing to accommodate their patrons as far as it can be done without detriment to the interests of the paper, or injustice to our friends. Our space is limited, and in order to make the columns at tractive, the matter should be as varied as possible. The numerous nominations for official preference, thus early in the campaign, will prove too heavy on our columns for gratuitous insertion, and, hence, we feel under the necessity of adopting a scale of rates for the insertion of such cards, or communications. Hereafter charge of twenty-five cents an inch (eight lines) or less, will be made for such insertions.

Springfield (Mass) Republican.

According to the Hartford Courant, a company of large capital, and composed of some of the wealthiest men of the place, has been formed in that city to market a method of converting heat directly into electricity. Electricians have in vain sought to do this, but it is claimed a Maine boy H B Cox, has solved the problem, and his invention is in the hands of the Hartford capitalists. If the reports are true, the much predicted revolution in motive power seems to be at hand. It is claimed that from a single gas jet electricity enough can be obtained to run a sewing machine, and at an expense that will make steam very costly in comparison. Economists have looked in this direction for such a cheapening of motive power as to decentralize capital to an lady, name not known who, by reextent that will solve the whole problem of capitalistic combination, and the State control of industry which might grow out of it. The developments of this invention, if what it is alleged to be, will be watched with world wide interest,

A Word With Mr. Jones.

Danville Register.

Rev Sam P Jones passed through the city yesterday morning on his way from Richmond to Atlanta, and as he was delayed at the depot for an hour. was called upon by a number of his

Mr Jones was in good trim and looked none the worse for his labors in Richmond.

"Were you satisfied with the Rich mond meeting?" he was asked by a scribe who was present.

"Well," replied Mr Jones, "it was a good meeting, but I'm mighty hard to satisfy. I'm like the boy who couldn't get enough sugar, and finally his father put him down by a barrelful and told him to help himself. The boy ate and ate until he couldn't eat any more, and his father finally asked him if he had enough. The boy replied: 'No, I haven't got enough, but I've got down to where the sugar don't taste good."

"We had a grand time last night," continued Mr Jones. "There were 12,000 people present and several of the brethren spoke out about the meeting. R H Whitlock, who is a splendid fellow, arose and said: 'Broth er Jones, I endorse you, but I think you use too much cayenue pepper. I like all but the pepper.' I told him that a fellow who had raw spots on his hide couldn't stand cayenne pepper, and it was five minutes before the crowd quit laughing."

"Have you got a message for Danville?" he was asked, as he started to the train.

Bless your soul, you tell the Danville people that they have got the grandest little city of its size in the country. I don't know another one like it, and you've got such a grand people here that it does me good even to pass through Danville on the Episode of the Hat.

Philadelphia Press.

A stately and handsome example of the well bred young lady attended a theatrical first night last week and occupied, with her escort, seats in the third row of the orchestra. She was so fair to look upon that a large share of the audience watched her as she went down the aisle and settled gracefully in a chair.

It was then observed, with much interest, that she raised her arms and detached from her head the fashionable hat that became her so well. Her hair was bright golden, and under the lights it fairly flashed in its beauty.

The old gentleman sitting be ind her settled back comfortably in his chair and congratulated himself that he had been placed behind such a thoughtful creature, for now he could not only see the stage, but a splendid head of hair as well.

Presently two or three young women in the immediate vicinity quietly removed their hats, having noted the admiration that the originator of the scheme had excited.

From this the movement spread until hatless feminine heads were discoverable all over the theatre, even to the rear rows of the circle. Between the acts a paper began to circulate among the people in the or-

Each gentleman, as he received it, read something that had been written on it, and then smilingly signed his name, after which he passed it to his immediate neighbor.

In a few moments the paper came back to the old gentleman that had started it on its travels. Bending for ward, he politely addressed the gold en haired girl, handing to her at the same time the paper. She read it, and as she did so a deep blush and a smile crept over her face. The paper was a vote of thanks signed by thirty ill. or more of the male spectators. Its text was as follows:

"We, the undersigned, desire to express our respectful admiration for a most beautiful and considerate young moving her hat from her bright golden head, has set the fashion for others, thereby rendering it possible for a delighted audience to witness the details of a stage performance."

The pretty girl cast a radiant suile over her shoulder at the old gentleman behind, and folding the paper, tucked it into the front of her dress by a bunch of pansies. And everybody was very happy.

Married at Daybreak.

New York Herald.

Columbia, S C, June 19 .- One of the most romantic weddings in high life ever celebrated in this State took place in Greenville yesterday.

Two years and a half ago Guy Harris, a youth of sixteen, the son of the merchant prince of the city of Spartanburg, eloped with Miss Susie Walker, the very pretty fifteen year old daughter of Colonel James Walker, ex-Mayor of the town and president of the principal bank. They were legally married by a notary public and the youthful groom immediately conducted his bride to his father's house and invited her parents to come over and participate in the wedding feast.

Colonel Walker objected to the marriage on account of the youth of the contracting parties and took his daughter North, and when she re turned she again entered society as a popular young lady. Col Walker declared the marriage illegal on account of the young people being under age but young Harris has considered himself legally married. Yesterday morning, just before day light, Miss Walker, accompanied by lady friends left her father's house, met Harris in an appointed place and arrived in Greenville an hour later. Here the young people were for the second time married, but this time by a minister of the Gospel, who had been a fellow passenger.
