Fairer than all the fantasies that dart Adown the dreams of our most favored sleep,

Thy perfect form, since Eden's day, doth keep
The constant pattern of a perfect art!
Yet more must we admire thy better The spirit strong to smile when others weep— And well know we who sail life's ocesn deep There is no haven like a woman's heart.

Thus, often weary ere the strife is Tired of my task, my head I fain would lay In some good lady's lap, as did "the Dane,"

And watch the action of the world go Knowing 'tis but a play within s The fleeting portion of an endless -Lippincott's Magszine.

Although it is years since Alexander T. Stewart died, and although his estate has been divided among heirs recognized by the courts, there are still some people who think themselves entitled to a share in the property. It is only a few weeks ago that another claimant on the ground of relationship turned up and wanted to know when he could get his inheritance. It is estimated by some of the lawyers connected with the Stew- same proportion art litigation that of cousins alone there have appeared nearly 2,000, and from the number of other alleged connections it is thought by the lawyers that Mr. Stewart had more relatives than any other man in the world. It won't be long, perhaps, before the notion that one is a Stewart heir will become a recognized form of insanity.
