W. R. Dale, alias J. O. H. Nutall Convicted.

ATLANTA, Aug 8.—Rev. Walter R. Dale, formerly pastor of Sixth Baptist Church of Atlanta, was yesterday convicted of bigamy, at Dallas, Ga., where he has been on trial for several days. Dale's story is one of romance. The testimony as adduced upon this trial, found him in North Carolina at a place called Wadesboro. There, it is stated, he was raised, and there he married a lady by the name of Horton, by whom he had four children. At that time he was known as J. O. H. Nutall. He was a jeweler by trade; one of those roving fellows who go about from place to place among the little towns. Dallas was one of the places he visited, and there he staid at the house of a man named Rawlings.

The daughter of Rawlings fell in love with Nutall, and they disappeared together. Nutall leaving behind him his wife and children.

He is next heard from in Conyers, Ga., where he turned up under the name of Fountaine. The relatives of the girl found them there, and succeeded in inducing her to return to her home. Fountain as he is now known, is next heard of in Rockmart where he appeared in company with a young girl who he said was his niece. He became involved in some trouble there and disappeared.

About the same time there appeared in Dallas, Ga., a jeweler named Walter R. Dale. Then came his conversion to the Baptist church, and after a while his admission to the ministry. He married in Dallas a Miss Smith, who is his present wife. After living there some time they came to Atlanta, and here the Rev. Mr. Dale was given a charge out in the suburbs of the city. He labored along faithfully, so far as is known, until he was recognized by an old friend from North Carolina as J. O. H. Nutall. He denies bitterly that he is Nutall, and has fought the case through a long trial, but today the jury found him guilty of bigamy as charged.

Dale tells a remarkable story about his life. He says his first recollection was of being a street Arab in New York. He drifted about until he came into the hands of a gambler named Big Ned McSweeney. With McSweeney he covered a good part of the country, and was known during this time as "McSweeney's Kid," or "Bull Wolford." He denies ever having lived in North Carolina, but acknowledges having been in different parts of Georgia during his career. He claims that he has been converted and has been laboring faithfully for the church.

His lawyers will appeal the case, which has already become remarkable in the criminal annals of Georgia. If Dale is not Nutall, then his is one of the most remarkable cases of mis taken identity ever known, for he has been positively identified by dozens of men.

We are now displaying near the Fayetteville street entrance a choice assortment of silk and jetted capes. These we show in Vandyke, Lace effect, etc. We have put with our fall's purchases some carried from last season, though in style they are all right, and in these we can offer inducements worthy of your attention. An early inspection is invited.

Saying and Doing.

Two brothers used to go to school together. One evening they thought they should like to have a holiday the next day, so they asked their father to give them one. He said, "I cannot because it will put you back in your studies; so mind you, go to school." One of the brothers said he would not, and his father was very angry with him.

The next day the one that had said "Yes" played truant, but the one that had refused went to school. Then the father said to them in the evening "Both of you are in the wrong; but you that promised to go and broke your promise is the worst of the two."

After Life.

G. D. Prentice.

It cannot be that earth is man's only abiding place. It cannot be that our life is a bubble cast upon the ocean of eternity, to float a moment upon its surface, and then go into nothingness and darkness forever. Else, why is it that the high and glorious aspirations leap like angels from the temples of our hearts and forever wander abroad, unsatisfied? Why is it that the rainbow and the cloud come over with a beauty that is not of earth and then pass off and leave us to muse on their faded loveliness? Why is it that the stars which hold their festival around the midnight throne are set above the grasp of our limited faculties, forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And, finally, why is it that bright forms of human beauty are presented to the view and then taken from us, leaving the thousand streams of the affections to flow back in Alpine torrents upon our hearts? We are born for a higher destiny than earth. There is a realm where the stars will be spread out before us like the islands that slumber on the ocean; and where the beautiful beings that here pass before us like visions will stay in our presence forever.

Consult Your Wife.

Locomotive Engineers' Journal.

Two gentlemen were talking about a business enterprise in which, though it involved some pecuniary risk, they were strongly inclined to embark. Finally one of them remarked:

"I must consult my wife before I decide."

"Why?" exclaimed the other, "is she boss?"

"No," was the reply, "neither am I. We are a well matched team; and we don't drive tandem. My wife is as much interested in the welfare of our family as I, and she has a right to have a voice in the investment of our little property."

There was nothing more than justice in this view of matrimonial obligation, especially in the case of poor, or only moderately well to do families and these comprise an overwhelmingly large proportion of the families in this country where a slight increase or diminution in the annual earnings would be felt alike by every member. The wife, who has labored in the home to earn or save, while the husband has labored in the field, the shop, or the counting room, is justly a partner in his earnings and savings and should share in all plans for disposing of their small accumulations, so as to make them more productive if all goes well.

Leslie Stephen, the noted English editor, who is the guest of James Russell Lowell, is not the rotund and jolly looking person that English cartoons have shown, but tall and slender, with hair and beard that give an impression like that produced by the best busts and portraits of Charles Dickens.

HOUSEKEEPERS can prove by a single trial that these Extracts are the cheapest; they are true to their names, full measure, and highly concentrated.
