The Progressive Farmer for this week is a number of unusual interest. A new departure is indulged in by way of a cartoon, illustrative of the "goose that lays the golden eggs." The matter is well gotten up with special reference to the Agricultural and Mechanical industries of the State. It is an excellent paper.

We call special attention to an ordinance passed at the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen, making it a fine of five dollars for any person or persons who shall empty or convey into the gutter or other open drains of the city, water from moters or fountains of any description, on or after September the 1st, 1890, and five dollars for each day if such violation is allowed to exist after said date.

Sad

We deeply regret to hear that Mr. L. W. Andrews, father of Mr. Greek O. Andrews, city editor of the News and Observer, was stricken with paralysis last Sunday night, at his home in Greensboro. We sincerely hope that he may recover.

Steve Jacobs, the Noted Outlaw of Robeson County.

The Governor today issued a warrant for his execution to take place on Friday, Sept. 26th. It will be remembered that Jacobs broke jail and fled and was caught down in Georgia and returned to this State last week.

Colored Convention.

A convention of the colored people of North Carolina called ostensibly to take into consideration affairs connected with the welfare of their race both from a political and personal point of view, met in Metropolitan Hall at 12:30 o'clock today. There was a considerable attendance including representative men from different sections of the State.

To place the objects of the convention in its true light, it can be stated on the authority of a prominent member that they were "here to claim a just share of the public patronage and to denounce those men who had assumed to themselves the sole leadership of the Republican party in North Carolina." Another delegate declared that this was the regular Republican Convention of the State, and that the Convention to be held next Thursday was a "variegated Convention." Whatever may be the motive for the call, it is conceded that the "pick of the race" was present, representing some of its worth in an intellectual point. This much can be said with due regard for candor.

The Convention was called to order by James H. Young, of Raleigh, who delivered a neat address. He denied the object of the Convention to be the disruption of the Republican party, that they were here to demand their just rights, etc. He said that if Mr. Window, was not satisfied with him for representing his people he might revoke the commission he held. He reviewed the position of the administration relative to office, and declared that the colored people will get nothing unless it be demanded. He denied drawing color line, but insisted that color should not debar him from office. He cited the revenue service for what he said relative to debarring men for color. The colored men are the Republican party of North Carolina. He invited the bosses to look at this Convention and see for themselves. He claimed that the colored race had all the professions, had all the white people had except the offices. He would give the bosses a lively time in carrying the State. He cited other Conventions, which resulted in elevating colored men to office. He said the Democrats had done some bad things, such as school fund distribution, placing on juries, Payne election law, requiring new registration, with residence, etc.

Ministers of the gospel present were invited to seats on the stand.

The call for the Convention was read. It arraigns the administration for non appointment of colored men to office, declares that the bosses seem to no longer desire their votes, except for their own selfish purposes, condemns the failure to pass the Blair bill, etc.

E. E. Smith, ex-Consul to Liberia, was made temporary chairman. On taking his seat he delivered a neat speech tendering his thanks for the honor conferred. He declared that the convention was the beginning of a great end, by expressing grievances and demanding redress.

Prof. C. H. Moore was chosen temporary secretary.

A committee on credentials was appointed—one from each Congressional district.

J. D. Patterson, editor of the Negro World, of Nashville, Tenn., was invited on the platform.

Dr. J. C. Price addressed the Convention. Said it was a colored man's Convention, and on that account he had a right to be here (Mr. Price is very black). Claimed proportionate part. He wanted no political office. He was for principle, but as a negro he expected fair treatment. If not he should give a protest to the bosses. Denounced self-constituted leaders who had gone to headquarters and reported that the negroes could be whipped into the line. The colored man likes fruit, peaches, apples water-millions, &c. He likes political fruit too, and ought to have it. The policy of prescribing the negro has resulted badly, but the negro was not responsible. He took up the educational qualities, which he discussed with some ability. Don't ask anything because we are colored, but we don't want to be denied everything because we are colored. He claimed to be a North Carolinian in all respects; native and to the manner born, and loved his native State. He dwelt with much facetiousness on the "due regard" in the law relative to education.

Prices speech was both eloquent and forcible; he made many very stirring points.

James H. Harris next spoke; no man could be at a loss to speak in behalf of the principles of the Republican party; that the convention had not met to ask anything because they were colored, but they came to ask recognition upon the principle of right. That the principles of the Republican party today were as correct as they were twenty five years ago, when they were first laid down.

He urged the convention not to blame the party for what a few individuals had done or failed to do. He held that the working man paid the taxes of North Carolina; that a mans thousands of acres of rich lands were worthless to any man without the negro to cultivate it and raise the tobacco and cotton upon which the planter realized his thousands. He said he liked the Democrats, that he loved some of them, that he had prayed for them and preached to them, hoping to convince some of them but he hated their political ways. He spoke on the Payne election bill, upon education and counseled the convention whatever they did to be moderate, conservative and deliberate, and make their demands in such a way as to be heard and heeded.

He said that when he was against the exodus movement his race was almost ready to put him out; that his predictions had proven true and it was wrong, impolitic; that letters had been received proving all these things. The exodus was wrong, indeed a misfortune.

John C. Dancy was called out and spoke for some time and made a very good speech. He said he was in deep and abiding sympathy with the principles which prompted the call of this Convention. There were men in the Republican party who did not endorse the principles of that party.

Rev. P. O. Connell said he was here simply to give countenance to the movement for which the Convention was called; He said you must control North Carolina. You can't trust her until you control; you must get hold of her some way or other.

On motion J. H. Williamson, the originator of the Convention was made permanent chairman by acclamation. He made a speech, giving an outline of the work the Convention was expected to do. He wanted it stated that the Convention was not a failure. He said he had voted for a man named John Nichols, who told him it was a disgrace for a negro to hold an office, and he should not hold an office in the 4th district if he could help it.

C. H. Moore was chosen permanent Secretary. At the time our report closed the committee had not reported on resolutions.

The Wilmington Excursion.

Let all who wish to enjoy a splendid trip to Wilmington and the sea coast, bear in mind the grand excursion to be given tomorrow by Messrs. King, Lacy & Sherwood. The Mary Jones' Concert, Etc.

Remember that the colored elocutionist, Mary Jones, appears at Metropolitan Hall tomorrow night.

The Salisbury Times says: The concert in the Opera House on Tuesday night was a very creditable affair indeed. The programme, which consisted in vocal music, recitations, &c., was carried out to the letter, and its rendition was excellent. As a rule, colored people have strong and powerful voices, but in the case of Mary Jones, hers is not only strong and powerful, but shows cultivation and training to a high degree. Her elocutionary skill is above the average, and she gives a down right good entertainment. She was greeted with a fine audience, but we are sure that a larger number would have been present had it been generally known that the concert was one of merit.

W H & R S TUCKER & Co.

Gentlemen!

We say it ourselves, but if you will look at them you would agree with us, and say that our vanity is pardonable. We allude to our line of neck-wear, collars and cuffs. We have a most elegant line of ties, of all styles and of the best qualities. Our line of 75c goods are simply superb. We believe the styles are prettier than we have ever seen, and the material is the same that you usually get in $1 goods. Then our 25c line is, we positively assert, the handsomest that has ever been shown in Raleigh. In this line we have about 45 styles in Tecks and four-in-hands. All for only 25c. Ask to see this line. You will say they are the best you ever saw for the money. In collars and cuffs we will only say we have any style, quality or description you want in the latest thing out. These goods at these prices are at Swindell's.

Improved.

The many friends of this gentleman will read with pleasure the following from Rev. J. L. White, taken from the Durham Sun.

Rev. J. L. White writes his congregation here from Blowing Rock that his health is greatly improved. He also said that he had received a letter from Greensboro which stated that, if he would consider a call from that place, he might name his own price. Mr. White preferred to remain here, and so wrote them.
