New Advertisements.

Attention is called to the advertisement of Mr. J. W. Cole, the old reliable Jeweler of this city. There is no house of the kind in North Carolina where the best of jewelry can be more readily obtained for the least cash prices. Call and see his stock.

We direct special attention to the advertisement of Mr. David Rosenthal, who has returned from the northern cities where he purchased the most complete stock of clothing and everything connected with gentlemen's wear ever brought to this city. We can safely say that there is no house in North Carolina that stands more deservedly high than this grand emporium of fashion. "Dave" seems to know just what the public desires, and caters to it in the best style. Give him a call. He will take the greatest pleasure in showing you around, and the inducements he offers will surely cause you to purchase.

A writer in the Forum advises people when they see a tornado or anything of that sort meandering in their direction not to get excited, but to remain cool and self possessed, just as if a tornado wouldn't snatch the hair off of a self possessed man as quick as any other. He should have coupled with his advice the injunction strike for a dug out without ceremony. The dug out is the only thing for which a tornado and "sich" have any respect.

A physician in charge of a well known asylum for the care of the insane, recently said: There is one infallible test either for the approach or the presence of lunacy. If the person whose case is being examined is seen to make no use of his thumb, if he lets it stand out at right angles from his hand, and employs it neither in salutation, writing, nor any other manual exercise, you may set it down as a fact that the person's mental balance is gone. He or she may converse intelligently, may, in every respect be guarding the secret of a mind diseased with the utmost care and cunning, but the tell tale thumb will infallibly betray the lurking madness which is concealed behind a plausible demeanor.

An authenticated case of a human nose that had been cut off being restored is told of in a medical paper. Operations of the character are often heard of, but almost invariably the reports lack confirmation. The patient was a young man employed in a cotton mill, and the operation was performed by Dr. Kelley, of Griffin, Ga. The organ was cut cleanly off by a rapidly revolving belt, and had remained where it had fallen for about an hour. It was washed carefully, and every antiseptic precaution used, and healed in the course of a week.
