LARGEST CITY CIRCULATION

RALEIGH, DECEMBER 10, 1890.

THE Board of Aldermen, of Richmond, Va., have decided to give the Confederate Memorial Literary Society the use of the Jefferson Davis Mansion for a museum of war relics.

THE State officials are all busy getting up their reports in time for the General Assembly. We have no data from which to make predictions, but we hear unofficially that there will be no need for much increase of taxation during the next two years, under existing laws. Of course, we can't tell what our law makers may do, but we hope for the best.

IT is still predicted by our business men that the present fall and winter will be the most successful for years. Many of our merchants are selling heavier than for several seasons past. The good crops have brought corresponding good times. Some in a position to know predict that the cotton receipts will certainly reach 35,000 bales—good.

THE OLD NORTH STATE.

Wilson is to hold an election on the 15th to determine whether it shall have electric lights.

Mt. Airy, N. C., Dec. 8.—Quite a snow is prevailing in this section and the Blue Ridge is covered as far as the eye can reach.

Under the new census North Carolina will stand eighteenth in point of increase and seventeenth in point of population among the States.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson, of Burdette, Mecklenburg county, was burned to death Friday last, her dress catching on fire while she was standing on the hearth.

Rev. James A. Weston, has temporarily accepted a position as assistant minister at Trinity Church, New York. This is but a temporary arrangement, as Mr. Weston does not propose to leave Hickory.

Charlotte Democrat: Tax Collector Torance has paid to County Treasurer McClintock the sum of $10,049, the public school fund for Mecklenburg county.

Hickory Carolinian: Asheville, we understand, is overloaded with lumber, and the dealers there have reduced the market price.

Statesville Landmark: The Lutheran congregation expect to have their new church completed and hold the first services in it by Christmas.

Tarboro Banner: Near Red Oak church, Nash county last week, a steam mill boiler exploded. Most of the boiler was carried 170 yards, and the shelter torn down. One man was hurt by the falling timbers of the shelter.

Rocky Mount Argonaut: The success of our tobacco market this season has been far greater than the most sanguine expected. The warehousemen say, the sales for the season will reach about five million pounds.

J. A. Tennant, of Asheville, has in his possession a silver watch which has been in the Tennant family for 170 years. It is a bulky affair being of about the same diameter as the modern watch, but is an inch and three eighths thick. The crystal is very heavy. The dial is marked with Roman characters.

AN EXPENSIVE COW.

How General Alger Repaid the Man Who Gave Him an Education.

Chicago Mail.

At the fat stock show several World's Fair Commissioners were discussing the high prices commanded by first class stock nowadays. Several instances were cited in which a single animal had brought a sum which a few years ago would have been pronounced fabulously large. "I recall one instance," remarked one of the gentlemen. "In which an ordinary milch cow, without any pedigree whatever, brought a price which compares very favorably with the case we have mentioned.

"Years ago General Russell A. Alger, of Detroit, lately the Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, was a youngster without a cent and with but one suit of clothes. He wanted to attend school and went to a physician who lived in the village to ask for a chance to work for his board. The doctor did not need the services of a boy, but he was so much impressed with young Alger's earnestness that he took him into his family circle and sent him through school. Alger did no work except to take care of the doctor's horse and one cow.

"But time has wrought great changes. Alger is now a millionaire, while his benefactor is an old man in straitened financial circumstances. One by one his children have died, until he and his old wife have been left alone. All offers of assistance by General Alger have been refused, for the old man is as proud as Lucifer himself. In consequence Alger has been forced to bestow his charities in many little roundabout ways so that their source could not be guessed. Recently he visited his old friend, determined to compel his acceptance of more substantial aid than he had been receiving.

"Why, Alger, you don't owe me anything," the old man said, "and I won't accept anything.

"But I owe my education to you."

"Bosh! You owe that to yourself."

"But I caused you trouble and expense, for which I want to repay you."

"The trouble needn't trouble you, and there wasn't much expense to speak of. In fact, the only expense that you caused me, so far as I can recollect, is the loss of a cow. Do you know, Alger, when you came to live with me I had the best cow in these parts, and that your awkwardness completely spoiled her? Well, it did. Within three weeks you had made her so skittish that no one could get near her, and I had to sell her for beef."

"Well, then, I owe you for that cow, don't I? And I'm going to pay you for her and will add a little interest for the use of the money for about forty years."

"After a long course of argument the old gentleman finally consented, very reluctantly, to accept pay for his cow. And the price paid for that ordinary grade cow is sufficient to support her former owner in fair circumstances during the remainder of his lifetime. She was a very expensive cow."

Charity is greater than justice; Yes, it is greater; it is the summit of justice—it is the temple of which justice is the foundation. But you cannot have the bottom; you cannot build upon charity. You must build upon justice, for this main reason, that you have not at first charity to build with. It is the last reward of good work. Do justice to your brother (you can do that whether you love him or not) and you will come to love him.—Ruskin.
