LARGEST CITY CIRCULATION.

RALEIGH, DECEMBER 29, 1890.

CO-OPERTTION WILL BRING PROS-PERITY.

Christmas is over and 1890 will soon be numbered with the great past. While there are sadening reflectious to which we could turn doubtless with profit, the future is before us, and if we can stimulate energy among our people, augment self reliance in the hearts of the dispirited, increase manly business habits among our young men and build up a more aggressive and general public spirited ness among all our people we shall do a greater work. What is needed as much as any other thing in Raleigh is co-operation. We should not look alone to the coming of outside parties to build up our city, but unite curselves in the work. Let each mecha: ic make the best arrangement he can to secure a home on such payments as around among the girls having a good ments and to make payments on that was gone, she was raving. home. And even the poor fellow who regards himself as proof against cu pids darts may find that a borne would be a very convenient thing to have, some day. Very few young men who star; out with the idea that to save the child. She died yester the present wages are too small for day morning. But, as her father them to save anything, ever reach the time when they can save for the future. he reason that thousands of young men come to naught, is . e cause they start out and continue to live without a definite object in view They are always going to begin, but continue to drift on spending all they can earn for present show and gratification.

A community in which all are . c cumulating a little every week and month for the future is necessarily a prosperous community. Let all who can, aid the mechanic and the clerk in getting a home, by offering liberal terms for the purchase of homes The more liberal the terms on which small houses for men of moderate incomes can be obtained, the more reliable, moral and thrifty will the working classes in that community be. The very best antidote for strikes and un reasonable demands on the part of thriftless employees is to sell them homes. Get them interested in the prosperity of the city. The same is true with reference to all employees. We know we are mixing things right much-the jocular with serious busi ness suggestions, but these things about which we are accustomed to jest generally, sometimes become very serious questions when we least expect it. Then it may be, we could wish the young man had a home; Beantiful assortment that he had acquired the economic habits that a practical effort to secure a home on small wages is calculated to stimu ate.

If we would have a model communlet every man in it do just all he to elavate and assist every other then we she attractive, the most prosperous and the happiest community to be found on the continent. Let's try it all through 1891.

LATE TO SAVE HER.

A Little Child Who Prayed For Her Parents and Died.

Philadelphia Times.

In one of the tenement houses on Sixth street, below South, there lives on the top floor back a Scotch family, the head of which bears the name of Arnold McKensie. Beside the parents there are seven children in the family, the eldest of which is a boy ten years old.

McKensie is a harness-maker by trade and has been in this country just six weeks A stranger in a strange land, he has had a hard time getting bread for his family since his arrival. He has worked at almost anything he could get to do, bravely and cheerfully, for his family's sake.

Two weeks ago however, he fell sick, and his troubles were increased. The soap box in which the little stock of coal was stored soon became empty, there was no fire, and the boxlike attic was draughty and cold. The grocer and baker were loth to trust the strangers, and so the sup ply of food as soon cut off. Then the tenant from whom McKenzie had sub let his room pushed for his rent, and the doctor prescribed beef tea and nourishment.

One of the children was a little girl named Mary, a true Scotch lassie, just turned seven years of age. When the other children clamored for bread she sat quiet and said nothing, but she droopped almost visibly. Every morning an 'evening the old Scotch Psalms were sung and the family knelt aroun I the table in prayer, the by economy and industry he con father, lying on straw in the corner, meet, and in a few years he will own leading the evotions. On Christmas it. Let each clerk do the same Tue morning the starving family assembyoung man who is just floating led as usual for prayer. Mary knelt with the rest, the Psalm was sung, time, with no especial choice, will and as it was finished Mary began to not always remain in that comatese sing the 23d Psalm in the Scotch mestate with reference to the girls, if | tre, "The Lord's my shepherd, I'll no he is any acount) cupid will send bis | want,' He mak's me doon to lie."
