LARGEST CITY CIRCULATION.

RALEIGH, JANUARY 31, 1891.

ENTERPRISES THAT PAY.

Some kinds of manufactures pay the single investor better than others, while there is very little outcome to the operatives.

In a community in which there are a large number of unemployed people the most profitable manufacturing, is that which materializes the largest amount of labor in the process of manufacture. In the manufacture of some articles the article made becomes worth many times the value of the crude material used, the labor invested in it having materialized to that extent. These are the lines of manufacture that are needed up and down the land. Raleigh has a large number of people that are unemployed and who want, yea, need employment; and if employed in manufacturing an article that would double its value in the process, it is easy to see that in manufacturing $1,000 worth you have materialized $500 worth of labor and made it a merchantable commodity. Now in this case the $500, invested in labor has yielded a fair profit to the operative and to the community, even if the article has to be disposed of at the net cost of the raw material and the labor invested in it.

We know a firm in Raleigh who have worked on this line; doing most of the work themselves, and in many instances charging for a finished job very little over what the same job would have cost them if they had hired all the work done at liberal wages. By this course they have furnished themselves constant work at good wages and have accumulated capital.

Why may not many who have small means combine in this way and build for themselves permanent business. The term Capital, doesn't always mean money by any means. Primarily it refers to the head. Very frequently one who has a well balanced well stored head is much richer than the man who has money. The world is busy materializing the brain and muscle forces of men, which it is converting into money. Why may not men without much means, who possess this brain and muscle force combine and build up very profitable establishments in various lines of manufacture? Why depend upon men of large means entirely. They are valuable but there are more openings than they can fill and more demands than they can respond to.

Grief Drove Him Crazy.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 30.—The Rev. M. Van Auken, a Lutheran minister from Utica, was taken from this city last night to the insane asylum.

Mr. Van Auken's wife was buried on the 17th inst. Last Saturday he came here to see his nephew, President Kellogg of the Elmira Bridge Company. Sunday he became insane from brooding over the death of his wife, and on Sunday night he disappeared.

At 5 o'clock on Monday morning he appeared at the home of Charles Kellogg, in Athens, Pa., and terrorized the family by appeals for protection from people he said were chasing him. He was finally induced to go to a hotel, but became more violent, and he drew a knife with which he threatened the people in the house. He was overpowered and locked up.

Yesterday afternoon a commission in lunacy declared him insane, and he was taken to a private asylum at Canandaigua.

MOVING THE LIONS.

Prof. Darling Safely Transfers His Pets to the Train.

Professor Darling, who has had charge of the lions in "Nero," at the Chestnut Street Opera House last week, took a quiet hour early yesterday morning for their removal, preparatory to taking them to New York. It was about 3 o'clock in the morning in the midst of a driving snow storm that the removal was made. Everything was in readiness. The monarchs of the desert were taken from their cages one by one by the trainer. He lifted the sleeping lions in his arm, slung them over his shoulder like so much mutton and carrying them out through the darkness deposited them in the iron lined van, which stood in the little alley in the rear of the Mercantile Library, where the stage door of the Opera House opens.

The night watchman at the theatre who has been living in a state of terror since the "Nero" engagement took to his heels when the Professor first entered the cage, and could not be induced to return until the ferocious animals were safely locked in the van.

Everything was accomplished quietly and without any audience. The wagon was driven rapidly to the Baltimore and Ohio Station, at twenty-fourth and Chesnut streets, where it was loaded on a car attached to a special train, which started for New York at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. The animals will be the attraction of the Standard Theatre this week.

Girls Are Not Wanted.

A Hindoo baby girl is an unwelcome addition to the family; her birth is supposed to be no blessing, but a curse and a sign of divine wrath, says the Contemporary Review. Rukh-mania says when a new born baby is a girl "the father gnashes his teeth and stamps his feet. The mother is sorely disappointed, and although her tenderness may bring its sure wealth of love, she curses both herself and the child. There is, moreover, a notion that women who bear only girls are sinful, and this intensifies the grief."

Another Hindoo woman gives the same testimony. Ramabai (high caste Hindoo widow) says that in no country in the world is a mother so laden with care and anxiety in anticipation of the birth of a child as in India. All her hope of happiness depends upon the sex of the unborn child. A wife who bears daughters and no sons is frequently put away by her husband; husbands sometimes threaten their wives that, if the coming child is a daughter, the offending mother will be henceforth banished from the society of her lord and master; a new wife will be installed in her place and the offending wife will be made into the servant and drudge of the household.

Ramabai does not merely make general statements to this effect, but gives several special instances that have come within her own knowledge among our own friends and acquaintances, of this punishment having been meted out to mothers who gave birth to girls. Mothers try to avert the bad luck of having a daughter by superstitious ceremonies previous to the birth of the child.
