ADVERTISE YOUR OWN SECTION

The primary object in exhibiting at all fairs and expositions is advertisement, and nothing but advertisement; and yet, it is surprising how many there are who make exhibitions at fairs without any clearly defined object in view. They just exhibit simply in a spirit of rivalry. The object to be had in view in the North Carolina exhibit at the Columbian Exposition should be with the one single object of presenting the most attractive features of our State in the most favorable shape, so that men may be induced to seek investments in farming, manufacturing, mining and in stock raising. Each county and sec tion should seek to have its most at tractive products and features placed in the strongest and most effective light.

Very many of our people exhibit at our State Fairs and at the County Fairs with no other object in view but the money there is in the premiums.

We know a capable farmer who farms year by year with the special object of contesting for premiums ln view, and he told us a few years since that his premiums that year amounted to about $1,500.

Our one object now, should be the attraction of men and capital to our country, and each locality should be very careful that it is not only not left out, but that its most attractive features be presented. This same idea should be kept in the minds of the people of each locality, and each man, and each farmer should add all he can to increase the attraction. We have a state with the grandest resources and the most desirable climate, and if we can properly present these to the outside world desirable population and abundant capital will pour in upon us. Let all be public spirited, at least, during these years of expositions.

Father of Thirty Four Children

A dispatch from Clarion, Pa., says "J. C. Kissinger, of Toby township, was married in 1819 at the age of nineteen. When he was thirty years old he was the father of eleven children, without a twin among them. When his eleventh child was a few weeks old the and his wife went on a visit over into Butler county, leaving the nine oldest children in charge of the house, the next one to the baby being left in care of Mrs. Kissinger's brother's family. While the father and mother were absent the house caught fire and the nine children were burned up with it. During the next ten years Kissinger's wife presented him with eight more children, and died soon after tearing her nineteenth child, being less than forty years old. Kissinger married again, and his second wife bore him fifteen children in twenty five years. At the age of sixty one Kissinger had been the father of thirty four children. He made a fortune at farming, and added a second one to it by turning banker. A resident of Toby township says Kissinger is hale and hearty at the age of ninety one. He counts his descendants by the score."

A COURAGEOUS WOMAN.

The Trip That Mrs. French Sheldon Will Make to Darkest Africa.

New York Press.

When a woman, and that woman is an American by birth, decides to spend six months, accompanied by a single white female attendant, in the wilds of Africa, there is naturally great interest in her and in the object of her undertaking, especially in her native land.

Mrs. French Sheldon, the woman who will sail 'from England in a few days upon this hazardous enterprise, is attractive and cultivated, with large dark blue eyes, beautiful brown hair and a frank and expressive countenance. She is widely known as an intellectual and gifted woman, of undoubted courage and quite competent to take care of herself in any. thing like an equal mental or physical encounter.

The friend of Stanley, Du Chaillu, Ward and other African travellers, she will start upon her journey well equipped with information of the country in which her researches and observations are to be made. She will start after reaching Africa, from Mombassa and proceed to Killiman jaro. Besides her own white female attendants she will be accompanied by about fifty picked and trustworthy natives. Her object, as she said in a recent interview, is not that of a missionary or a philanthropist, as has been erroneously stated, and she has no geographical or commercial purpose. "I go," she said, "upon my own responsibility, and for my own purposes, one of which is that I want information for finishing a book I have had in hand for some time." Another of her objects is to "study the natives, especially the women and children, while they are still in their primitive state."

Mrs. Sheldon will have, as a part of her equipment, a complete photographic outfit, with which she will make views of what she considers interesting and use them in illustrating her book. Among her other studies she will give some attention to the constellations, planets and stars, and to aid her in this pursuit she has received some valuable hints from Mrs. Richard Proctor.

Her method of travel will be inter esting. A chair is being made for her, which, as she describes it, is 'quite a wonderful structure," and in which she will be carried by twelve of the natives. The chair is "wonderfully light, and so ingeniously made that her attendant and herself can sleep in it at night." Mrs. Sheldon will go armed with two excellent revolvers, made especially for her, and with which she will defend hera self if necessary.

Speaking of how she will travel, Mrs. Sheldon says: "I am not going, mind you, as either a buccaneer or a harlequin. I am simply going as a woman who has common sense, and who thinks the journey can be made in a womanly way, and without indulging in any violent eccentrici-

Everybody in this country and in all countries will wish this courageous woman the success which her enterprise deserves.

Horrible Fate of an Innocent Girl.

MT. PLEASANT, Mich., March 16 .-Dennis Burns left his home in Wise, 11 miles north of here yesterday. His wife went to a neighboros, leaving her three children ir bed. While gone an unknown man entered and assaulted the eldest girl, and set fire to the house to hide the crime. The house was destroyed. The girl was so badly burned that she died in an hour after telling the stork.
