SELFISHNESS.

The amount of selfishness there is in this world and the work it accomplishes is just wonderful. An exchange in an article on the advantages that the rich enjoy, says: "Is there not something wrong in the social system that sends the masses of men into the hot stuffy shops and into the sun parched fields to labor in all weathers in order that the few may rush to the seaside upon the approach of the first warm days in May?" Now what does our exchange mean? Is there anything in fact existing to justify such a complaint? If so who are the guilty parties. These unreasonable charges are generally made by those who have tried to get riches themselves and having failed, as the very large majority of mankind do, become soured with those who do succeed in accumulating money, and charge them indiscriminately with robbery and oppression. There are some men who get their money through crooked ways, but not all. Then don't abuse them just because you and they have been after the same thing and they have succeeded while you have failed. My friend, all this snarling and complaining comes from your selfishness. You are just down on the successful man because you are not that man. If you had a million or two you would hie you away to the sea shore too, and who would blame you, nobody but the envious fellow who is mad because he does not stand in your shoes in relation to that property. He is a communist.

There are things, however, that need watching. There is a dangerous power, in the concentration of capital which should be watched closely and checked, if possible to do so, whenever it attempts to combine against the interests of the people. But don't let us be so unjust as to accuse every man who has accumulated more money than we have of being an oppressor and the one for whom we are forced to toil. Let us learn to discriminate. The world is vastly better off for having great riches in the hands of some men.

THE NORTHERN SETTLERS CONVENTION.

The time between now and the assembling of this Convention is so close at hand that we must be excused for frequent reference to it. It is a Convention peculiarly calculated to arouse the interest of the people of North Carolina. They ask for increased immigration; they invite it particularly from the Northern and Northwestern States; we have had some of it as will be proved by this very Convention, which will be composed of Northern men long settled among us. If they have been satisfied with their new relation to the South, then will more of their countrymen acquire confidence to come and join them. If they have prospered, then will others be induced to come and share their good fortune. We have no fears for the result of the Convention. Past observation has proved that the testimony of the Northern people will bear witness to friendship, to harmony, to unrestricted freedom of thought and speech, and to prosperous, industrial conditions, and also to climatic salubrity and healthfulness, in all of which they had to combat and overcome many misconceptions and misrepresentations.

Therefore we urge for our sake and for theirs, a full attendance of Northern settlers. Their work will go to their old homes as missionary work; it will be a harmonizer, pacificator and enlightener.

Driven by a Corpse.

Cabman Thomas Gilbert died on his box while driving a passenger to the West Side Union depot. After the Chicago opera house was built Gilbert made his stand at the southwest corner of Clark and Washington Sts. He was there at 8 o'clock, when a man stepped into his cab and said, "Drive me in a hurry to the West Side Union depot." Gilbert climbed on the box, and gathering up the reins swung his horse into Washington street and headed west. A crowd of people was surging into the Chicago opera house when the cab rattled by. Some one noticed Gilbert's head droop and then fall over on his breast. The whip fell from his hand and he clutched at the iron rod of the box.

"That cabman's dying," said the man who had noticed Gilbert's actions. He followed the cab. Three or four others followed him. The horse trotted along Washington street and stopped for a moment at La Salle to let a Milwaukee avenue cable train pass by. At Fifth avenue the man who had followed the cab from the Chicago opera house overtook it and grabbed the bit. The occupant of the cab leaped out and demanded what right the stranger had to stop the horse. "I have only ten minutes to make my train," he said excitedly, and I paid this cabman in advance to haul me to the Union depot."

"You will never reach the Union depot with this driver," said the man who stopped the horse. "Look up there and you will see that you are being driven by a corpse."

Two men climbed on top of the vehicle and lifted the driver off. He was dead. His fingers were twined around the iron rod of the seat.—Chicago Herald.

An Honest King.

Whoever reads the following must own to a feeling of respect as well as liking for the honest king.

King Frederick VI., of Denmark, while traveling through Jutland, one day entered a village school, and found the children lively and intelligent and quite ready to answer his questions.

"Well, youngsters," he said, "what are the names of the greatest kings of Denmark?"

With one accord they cried out,— "Canute the Great, Waldemar and King Christian IV."

Just then a little girl to whom the schoolmaster had whispered something stood up and raised her hand. "Do you know another?" asked the king.

"Yes; Frederick VI."

"What great act did he perform?"

The girl hung her head and stammered,—

"I don't know."

"Be comforted my child," said the king; "I don't know either."
