A LEADER ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESS.

In every enterprise in human affairs there must be a leader. And even though the leader be a poor one, if the following be harmonious and confidence inspiring, success will generally result; while on the contrary, though the leader be an efficient one, if there be discord, rivalries, criticisms and factions, failure may be expected, especially when the factions have much force. This is not only so in human society, but some times it is demonstrated among the lower animals. It is said that in South America, one ordinary cur dog, backed by a flock of sheep will keep off the jackals which come to kill and destroy the sheep. The dog being trained to lead and the sheep to follow, form a pointed moving mass at his heels as he bounds forth, emboldened by his following to meet the approach of the jackals, present such a formidable appearance as to intimidate and put the ferocious wild brutes to flight. Let North Carolina take note of this, and let each locality and city accept the philosophy found here, which is almost, if not, of universal application, and while the constituted leaders may not be Napoleons, or Lees; they may not be Websters or Henry Clays; they may not be Martin Luthers or John Wesleys, still they are the leaders and the interests they are leading will succeed or fail, largely in proportion to the extent of the co-operation they receive. There must, however be co-operation, or failure is sure, whether in Church or State, in municipal governments, city enterprises, or family prosperity and happiness.

There are cities and towns in North Carolina, which at their start had not the advantages of others, which they have greatly outstripped and it is attributable almost entirely, to the spirit of co-operation which has obtained among their people. Let us quit our croaking and criticizing, and throw our influence and efforts in the direction to succeed in whatever enterprise that is for the good of the city or section, whether it be Raleigh or the entire State of North Carolina. Let us stand together, in the present rivalrous struggle for southern prosperity.

Fifteen Minute Sermons.

BY REV. DR. CHARLES F. DEEMS,
PASTOR OF THE CHURCH OF THE STRANGERS.

You ask me what I think of the German Emperor's edict that the clergy at the Prussian Court shall confine their sermons to the space of fifteen minutes? I have seen no announcement of any such stupendous folly on the part of any man. I should like to know the exact facts in the case. But I may say that if any man ever did what is imputed to the German Emperor he would at once furnish a subject de lunatico inquirendo.

There are some things over which neither Emperor nor Empire can have any control. No church can have a right to say how long its clergy shall preach. Certainly much less can any secular power. A minister is an ambassador from God, and is to be listened to as representative of a foreign power.

It would be a nice place of impertinence for the Queen of England to say how long the representatives of the German Empire should address her in conveying a message from the Emperor to Her Majesty. She might not give a hearing, she might retire, she might indicate by very proper and ladylike and queenly behavior when she thought it was proper for a Minister Plenipotentiary in addressing her to bring his remarks to a close, and she could direct her own Minister not to speak to another longer than fifteen minutes.

Perhaps it is upon that ground that the Emperor has issued this direction. He may regard the clergy as his officers. Perhaps they are, if they so regard themselves, and an established church would seem to give color to this supposition. Then there is no more to be said. Their trouble is that they belong to a church established by law, and when a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ submits to that humiliation he can have nothing more to say.

As to the length of a sermon in general, no rule can be laid down; either for oneself or for another. No preacher needs the same length of time for every subject. Some sermons need not be over fifteen minutes' long, and I have heard sermons which occupied some ninety and some a hundred and twenty minutes, and were not one second too long.

Three factors must unite to determine the length of any sermon—the preacher, the subject and the audience. In gunnery the elevation of the gun will be affected by the charge of powder; so in preaching the preacher ought to know about how much powder he has in him when he goes to the pulpit, and he must take account of the target he is going to hit.

To change the figure, he is like an advocate; he must know his case and the legal strength of the position it occupies, and the jury he wishes to carry. It is playing with preaching to have a little moral discourse to be read off. Every sermon should be delivered with an absorbing desire to win a verdict from the jury, and the advocate must hang to them if it requires six hours; and he doesn't know his business if he doesn't know quit at the close of six minutes if he is sure he has won his verdict.

So much depends upon the congregation! If a man perceives that he has an invincibly stupid congregation which can neither be softened by all the sweetness of Calvary nor blasted by all the dynamite of Sinai, the sooner that man quits preaching after he has begun the better for all parties in heaven and earth. But to measure off sermons by the yardstick three times five minutes to a yard, just as you would measure off unbleached shirting, seems to me to throw contempt on heaven and earth.

It's a Queer World.

"It's a curious world," sighed a Georgia politician as he knocked the ashes from his cigar and gazed very thoughtfully out of the hotel window.

"In what way?" asked his companion.

"Well, politically," was his reply. "I know a dozen men in my county who have left home, wife, children, business, everything, to run after a miserable county office which isn't worth $300 a year. And for such an office they are willing to pay $500!"

"By the way, Colonel," said his companion, "what office are you running for now?"

"Coroner, sir!" shouted the Colonel with great enthusiasm, "and I'll have it if it costs me a thousand dollars."—Atlanta Constitution.
