Mayor Badger went on a short business trip to Durham yesterday.

The rumble of politics will soon be heard in the land.

Tremendous crowds attend the Fife meetings at Oxford.

Federal Court will meet in Charlotte next Monday with Judge Dick presiding.

All the guessing we have heard about the merchants purchase tax, is in favor of the decision for the State.

A tremendous audience greeted the Emma Juch Opera Company in Charlotte last night.

The Two Johns Comedy Company are coming. They are funny and no mistake.

Let us have a genuine old fashioned turnout of D. Q. 's. on Christmas day. A little fun now and then comes in all well.

Those desiring to have cakes baked for Christmas would do well to send their orders to the King's Daughters. They will be faithfully attended to.

Rev. Geo. R. Stewart, the assistant of the Rev. Sam Jones died in Bristol, Tenn., last Wednesday, says the Charlotte News.

Mr. H. I. Leech, the advance agent of the "Two Johns" Comedy Company, is in the city making arrangements for their appearance here on Friday the 18 inst.

Rev. Mr. Hurlay the new pastor of the Central Methodist Church, arrived in the city this evening, and is stopping at the residence of Rev. Dr. J. B. Bobbitt.

We will soon have a new brick hotel of large dimensions, with all modern improvements. There is no doubt about it.

Mr. John Thomas, of this city, and Miss Annie Lockhart, of Richmond Va., were united in marriage at the latter place last Wednesday.

We are glad to hear that Mr. Prince, the gentlemanly agent of the Emma Juch Opera Company, contemplates firing a date for the appearance of the troupe here. This is good news.

The ladies of the Baptist Tabernacle are serving refreshments daily at the former rooms of Mr. Moseley on Fayetteville street. Business men can have meals sent to them on application.

There are now 108 students at the Agricultural and Mechanical College. After the holidays it is expected that the number will reach 120.

The distribution of the pension money will help out much for the Christmas holidays. About $85,000 will be distributed throughout the State.

Now that President George of the street railway is in the city, we hope he may look into the practicability of a belt line. It will help suburban property, and be a source of profit to the railway company.

As our patriotic governor is now fully established in the Executive Mansion, a popular reception on the 1st of January would not be out of place. It will be the revival of an old time honored custom, and the people like it.

Everybody is predicting a dull and hard time next year; there is no use in crossing the bridge before we get to it. All that is needed is a little more energy and strict economy. No danger of starving in a country like this, if we half try.

See notice of Corinna Monger administratrix in this issue.

The market is being glutted with rabbits.

Several cases of grippe are reported in the city, but they do not appear of a serious type.

Why is it we cannot have a well organized Young Mens Christian Association in Raleigh? This is a question often asked. Most of the towns in North Carolina have such associations, and, they are in a flourishing condition, too.

Fanta Claus is establishing headquarters all over the city. The windows of the stores are beginning to look beautiful and enticing. Now, advertise your goods and sell them out. You can't do so unless you do.

Boston brown bread and beans will be served tomorrow from noon till night, by the ladies of the Tabernacle Church at Moseley's old stand on Fayetteville street. Call and get some.

The marriage scene in the window at Moseley's late dining rooms, now used for Bazar purposes by the ladies of the Tabernacle is attracting much attention and is a very pretty piece of work.

It was almost impossible to get along Hargett street between Wilmington and Blount today, on account of the wood cars. Is this state of things to continue. Our city fathers surely should heed the popular voice and establish a city wood yard.

The Commonwealth Knitting Factory in Durham is doing a thriving business. We heard some time since that a similar factory was to be started in Raleigh, but, of late, the matter seems to have rested quiet. Such a scheme, we should think would pay.

Next Sunday being the first quarterly conference of the year, Rev. Dr. Cunningham will preach at Edenton Street Church in the morning and Dr. J. H. Cordon at night. Love feast tonight in the Sunday School room of Edenton Street Church, conducted by Rev. Dr. Cunningham.

Our Patrons.

THE VISITOR has cause for congratulation, in that we have been the recipient of patronage and favors at the hands of the businessmen of Raleigh, which entitle them to our thanks, and whatever of good we can accomplish for them in the way of extending their trade. With this view we desire to present to our readers the names of our patrons, giving the advantages our people can derive by visiting their establishments during the season just preceding Christmas. In the line of dry goods, notions, and in fact everything connected with a well regulated establishment we start out with

SWINDELL

This well known house is now in full blast on Fayetteville street, next door to the Raleigh National Bank. As a regular "hustler" Swindell acknowledges no superior in the business world. At his mammoth house can be found as many things for diversified use, as ever graced the proverbial "old curicuity shop," so vividly portrayed by Dickens. It is not what Swindell has on hand. The enquiry would be more pertinent what he has NOT. For beautiful display, fine arrangement and an elegant assortment of everything in the dry goods line, Swindell can well challenge admiration. From a paper of pins to the finest silk fabrics, the display is wonderful, and the prices are so low as to cause the utmost surprise. We cordially invite all our people to call at once and look over the superb stock. It will repay a visit, and when once seen will doubtless be appreciated.

In further progress in the dry goods line of our city, we note the well known house of

W. H. & R. S. TUCKER.

It is almost superfluous in us to dwell at length upon this grand establishment. It ranks as not only second to none in North Carolina, but its reputation has gone even beyond the limits of the entire country. Our more elderly people well remember its founders, and they also know its successful history embracing a long period. As it has been, so it is now, the leader of fashion and the receptacle of everything in the dry goods line. Not only this but they have a varied assortment, consisting in part of the most beautiful furniture, bric a brac, toys, and in fact thousands of things too numerous to mention where the most splendid gifts for the holidays can be obtained. Within the magnificently arranged walls of this mammoth emporium, everything is like clock work. Here in profusion are piled in beautiful array, the fabrics of our own and foreign countries, all offered at such astounding low prices as cannot fail to attract purchasers. Let no one in search of neck ties fail to visit "Tuckers." It is a mammoth show indeed, and should be seen by all, both strangers and citizens.

NORRIS' DRY GOODS STORE.

In the matter of energy, push and business view there is no superior to this establishment, and the line of goods carried, together with the low prices asked command it most favorably to the public. Situated in the immediate centre of the business traffic of the city at P. S. Wait's old stand, on Fayetteville street, and under the control of a gentleman of almost unlimited experience it is no wonder that our people flock thither for all the novelties of the season in the dry goods line generally. The stock is perfect and embraces the most varied assortment. There can be found thousands of articles, useful as well as ornamental, from which something can be purchased as gifts for friends. Nice dresses, fine shoes and notions innumerable. It is indeed a vast emporium of novelties upon which the eyes can feast. Accommodating ladies and gentlemen await your coming and the greatest pleasure is taken to set out all which you may desire. There is no better place to spend your money, because there is none where you can more safely say you have gotten the worth of it. Go to Norris' dry goods house and be suited.
