UNFERMENTED GRAPE JUICE

The grapes are picked when they are fully ripened and the juice extracted and bottled as soon as possible afterwards. The bottles are filled brimful and placed up to their necks in vats of hot water within ten degrees of the boiling point. When the must is as hot as the water, the cork is forced into the bottle, expelling a portion of the liquid. No fermentation will ensue. As the liquid cools it contracts, leaving a vacancy between the cork and the liquid; but the vacancy must not be an atmospheric chamber. The cork must, of course, be thoroughly air tight.

If fermentation does set in, it may be driven off by reheating the wine. The bottles are then laid on their sides in a cool place, and the organic foreign substances must always be allowed to settle, so that the liquid may become clear. The wine can lie six months or a year without damage. At the end of the setting period, it should again be filled into bottles, the sediment being left behind. These bottles must be brimful, and should again be set in vats of hot water, heated up to the same degree and corked in precisely the same manner as at first, using sealing wax to exclude the air. The wine is then left to cool in the ordinary way and must be put away where the temperature is even and cool. It is now ready for use, and will keep just as long as it is kept free from contact with the atmosphere. This makes a very delightful beverage, entirely free from alcohol.—E. Hulse, before the Victoria Vegetable Commission, Australia.

CRANKY ANIMALS.

"Some animals exhibit a queer lack of sense," says a man who has observed them. "Put a buzzard in a pen about six feet square, and open at the top, and it is as much a prisoner as though it were shut up in a box. This is because buzzards always begin their flight by taking a short run, and they either cannot or will not attempt to unless they can do so.

Again; take a common bumble bee and put it in a goblet. It will remain a prisoner for hours, trying to escape through the sides, without ever thinking of escaping through the top. So also a bat cannot rise from a perfectly level surface. Although it is nimble in its flight when once on the wing and can fly for many hours at time without taking the least rest, if placed on the floor or on flat ground it is absolutely unable to use the wings. The only thing it can do is to shuffle helplessly and painfully along until it reaches some trifling elevation from which it can throw itself into the air, when at once it is off like a flash."

EAGLES KILL A BABY.

DETROIT, Mich., August 6.—Two eagles had a duel to the death yesterday for the possession of the six months old baby of Peter Shaw who lives four miles north of Albia, in Presque Isle county. Mrs. Shaw had laid the baby down in the grass and returned to the house for a few moments, when an enormous eagle swooped down on the infant and sunk its talons into the little one's flesh and clothing. The mother heard her baby's cry, but came too late to be of service. Her shrieks, however, also brought the father, who mounted a horse and, armed with a rifle, rode to the shore of a near by lake, where he knew there was an eagle's eyrie in the cliffs. Shaw arrived just in time to witness a terrible sight. Two eagles were hovering above a rock, filling the air with their cries and battling for possession of the baby, that lay high upon the cliff. Before the father reached the summit one of the eagles had fallen dying to the ground, while the other had again taken up the child for another flight. The father fired and the bird and baby fell into the water. The frantic father plunged into the lake, caught up the body, but the little one was dead. He took home the child's body, with those of the two eagles.

A REIGN OF TERROR.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 6.—A reign of terror exists in George's township, this county, over the threats of the notorious Cooley gang against Thos. Collier and others for causing the death of Jack Cooley, their leader, three weeks ago. The outlaws have sworn vengeance on Collier, and he is obliged to keep an armed guard of neighbors in his house every night for protection.

The whole southern end of the county is in a state of terror over the recent midnight robbery of William Smith, a Nicholas township farmer, of $1,000, and other exploits of the Cooley gang. The general feeling of insecurity is shown in Collier's formal notice to the sheriff to day: It is:

"To George A. McCormick, Sheriff: You are hereby notified that I have received warnings from reputable citizens of Fayette that an attempt to burn or destroy my property and injure or kill myself or family will be made by a band of lawless men led by Frank Cooley, a fugitive from justice, for whom I am informed you have a process or warrant. As a citizen and taxpayer of Fayette county I demand the protection of the authorities of said county, and give you notice that I will endeavor to hold the county of Fayette responsible for any injury to myself, my family, or my property done by these notorious law breakers.
THOMAS S. COLLIER"
