

Death of Judge J. J. Davis.
His Excellency Gov. Holt this morning received the following dispatch: LOUISBURG, N. C., Aug. 8, 8:10 a. m. Gov. T. M. Holt, Raleigh, N. C. Judge Davis died last night at 10:05 o'clock. The funeral will take place here tomorrow (Tuesday) at 10:30.

C. M. COORE.
Gov. Holt at once sent the following telegram:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, Aug. 8, 1892.
Mrs J. J. Davis, Louisburg, N. C.
The State has sustained in the death of that eminent jurist, pure and upright Christian gentleman, Judge Davis, an irreparable loss, and, while mourning with me over this sad affliction, tender to you and your family loving sympathy in this your hour of bereavement.

THOMAS M. HOLT, Governor.
Although the precarious health of Judge Davis for some time past has prepared his relations, friends and the public generally for the sad termination, yet the announcement will be received throughout North Carolina with the utmost sorrow. There was no public man in our State who stood more deservedly high with the people of all classes. In all public relations as Congressman or Jurist he won the proud title of a pure and patriotic man, while as a Christian gentleman he endeared himself to the social circle.

As soon as the news was received the flags on the capitol were placed at half mast, and other demonstrations of respect will follow.

Can This Be True?

The Shelby Review says: There is an old man in No. 5 township who some time ago deeded his property to his son upon the agreement that the son should care for him what little time he had to live. After getting possession of the property he drove the old man away. Some days ago the feeble old man went back to beg for bread. It was refused him and he turned back. Feeble from want of food, bowed down with sorrow and humiliation, he fell exhausted by the wayside, where he was found by neighbors who took him to a house near by and ministered to his needs. When driven from home by his inhuman son the old man was given an asylum by a daughter, who had been deserted by a worthless husband who left her destitute.

A Lamp Story.

We tell the story as it was told to us. A very reliable gentleman named Mr. Jones, who lives near the Raleigh & Gaston Depot, on yesterday afternoon during the storm, noticed that his lamp was burning. He extinguished it, but in a moment there came a vivid flash of lightning and the lamp was again lighted. He concluded that the better part of wisdom was to remove it to the yard, which he did in quick order. Perhaps the visitation of Mars had something to do with it. At any rate, it beats "Aladdin and his wonderful lamp."

Last week 3,599 pounds of news papers and periodicals were handled at the Charlotte post office.

The Last Man.
The following is of interest in solving a vexed question: The oldest living Mason, the oldest collegiate graduate, and other problems of antiquity have given place for the time being to the question as to who was the last man killed in the war. Mr R. T. Conley, who was an officer in Thomas' North Carolina legion, informs the Atlanta Constitution that the unfortunate individual was a Federal soldier named Arwood, whose remains lie buried in the cemetery at Asheville. Arwood was shot on the 6th of May, 1865, in a skirmish at White Sulphur Springs, near Waynesville, N. C. If anybody was killed at a later date now is the time to make himself known.

Free Scholarships.
It would seem that almost any bright boy would now be able to secure an education at our University. Sixty scholarships are offered to needy boys. Testimonials are required from well known men, as to character, talents and needs. Free tuition is also given by act of the Legislature to the sons of all ministers, to candidates for the ministry, to bona fide public school teachers, and to young men and bodily infirmity. Full information can be had from President Winston.
