FAR AWAY.

Correspondence of VISITOR.
It is indeed a task to know just when and how to begin this my second letter. It was my purpose to give your readers about one letter weekly, but my duties as pastor of the Baptist church here may debar me from always being punctual. However, I promise to write as often as possible.

I have been a little indisposed of late, having had a touch of mountain fever which compares well with your break bone fever. I did not intend to convey in my last letter the idea that I had already fully regained my health. No, I am far from being well yet, but much improved, and trust that sufficient time will, with this almost perfect climate, effect a final and complete cure.

I left Raleigh May 16, via Norfolk and Washington, and having enfeebled myself from the worry of leaving home and the necessary preparation for leaving I stopped at a sister's near Suffolk, Va., two weeks in order to husband as much strength as possible for my long journey. I felt exceedingly lonely as I stood on the wharf at Norfolk thronged with people and watched the magnificent boat Washington as it neared the shore, had a peculiar sense of going far from home, drifting alone out on something that might mean worse than nothing to me in my search for health, hoping, yet fearing, dreading, yet risking; "all that a man hath will he give for his life." I was somewhat startled and aroused from the restive reverie into which I had plunged, when I saw on board the steamer your excellent citizen and my esteemed friend, Mr. J. D. Boushall, who shared his state room with me and introduced a number of friends. Arriving at Washington and having purchased a ticket to Raton, New Mexico, visited the National Museum and Smithsonian Institute, and there I became interested in what I should probably have passed almost unnoticed under any other circumstances. There, right before my eyes, were some of the Pueblo Indian villages of New Mexico. Had I not had my ticket in my pocket and the ticket agent my money I think I should have been tempted to "crawl," as the boys say, for standing in Washington City I imagined myself crawling into a little dirt house and snuffing ashes for the time being; indeed, if some of you could see some of the houses that I can, as I write, see from my window, with no knowledge of environment's, you would expect to lose your scalp, but you shall have something of these Pueblo villages and Indians later; let it suffice now to say that Raton is not a Pueblo village. Leaving Washington, via the B. and O. R. R., passing through St. Louis at the time of an overflow of the river, arriving at Kansas City, Mo., I started on the 3d of June direct to Raton, crossing those immense and seemingly boundless plains of Kansas, arriving at La Junta Colo on June 4th, within a little over 100 miles of Raton. Kansas City, Mo., looks high and mountainous, but from this place to La Junta there is steadily, ceaseless, climbing, and from La Junta to the Colorado State line (which is only about six miles from Raton) and in a distance of about 100 miles you go up, up, up 3,561 feet, which makes you 7,622 feet above the sea and you are not on top the mountains, but in them. Pass through this tunnel down an incline of about 300 feet and you are at Raton, a little modern town, but badly infested with the spirit of the woolly West. Now that you have finally arrived with me at Raton, and as it is natural that you are suffering from some fatigue, being nearly time for supper, and desiring to satisfy their appetites, made voracious by this health giving atmosphere, we will desist in a further search of things this time and take a rest.

Your Truly,
JONATHAN WOOD.
Raton, New Mexico.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

The Chronicle of this morning says: "Yesterday the railway commission filed its opinion in a case which has been much talked of. Mr. E. P. Albee complained that he was charged 65 cents on a telegraphic message over the line of the Western Union telegraph company from Elizabeth City to Winston, in violation of the railway commission's order fixing 25 cents as the rate of messages. It appeared that there were two lines to Norfolk from Elizabeth City, one private and the other operated by the Norfolk Southern railway under the usual contract between the railways and telegraph companies; that the Western Union refused to transmit commercial messages over its own line from Elizabeth City and Edenton, forcing all over the private line which had no connection to other points in North Carolina, thus avoiding the 25 cent rate fixed by the commission. The commission dismissed Albee's case, as he had filed his message at the private line, and is not therefore entitled to recover damages. But the commission adjudges that the telegraph offices at Elizabeth City, Edenton and other points on the Norfolk and Southern railway in this State are offices of the Western Union telegraph company, and that the company shall transmit commercial messages at the rate set by the commission were filed to other offices in North Carolina; this ruling to take effect August 22d. The commission further holds that telegraphic messages transmitted by the defendant over its said line from Elizabeth City or Edenton or other points in North Carolina to points in said State, do not constitute commerce between States, although traversing another State in the route, and are subject to the rate prescribed by the commission."

TYPESETTING WITH BOTH HANDS.

New York Telegram

The foreman of a composing room has conceived the idea of using both hands in picking up and setting the types in the stick. Evers use the composing stick was known the left hand has held the stick while the thumb pressed each successive type into place against the piece already in line. A one armed compositor came to the foreman's room, and with a single hand set almost as much type as his fellow laborers did with two. After thinking this over, the foreman worked out two inventions, by which he proposes to use both hands at once. The first is a little mechanical device for taking the place of the thumb, and the second is an attachment by which the stick can be put in a convenient position for receiving the type, without being in the way of any subsequent operations. Having got so far, the foreman found that his next step was to train the left hand. This was by no means easy, but after patience and practice a considerable degree of efficiency was attained, and he added 60 per cent to his former capacity.
