RALEIGH, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1892.

NO. 16

CITY IN BRIEF.

"We told you so" is now in order. See notice of sales of land by J. N. Holding trustee.

The health of Senator Vance continues to improve.

It is getting about time for some really hard winter weather.

The students of Trinity College enjoyed a general holiday yesterday.

The North Carolina M. E. Conference will meet in Goldsboro on December 14th.

The county officers will be sworn in and give their bonds on the first Monday in December.

The question of the extension of the city limits will soon come up for discussion on the subject.

All the telegraph folks did their duty nobly yesterday. They are a hard worked but ever accommodating crowd.

The great value of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh is vouched for by thousands of people whom it has cured.

We are pleased to see in the city our friend Mr. David Anderson, now of Washington D. C. but formerly of this city. He is looking well.

"The saddest words ever written or seen are those which read, 'It might have been'."

Col. Julian S. Carr is preparing to furnish his new hotel in Durham in splendid style. It will be one of the finest establishments of the kind in the South.

The Century for October contains a fine portrait of Dr. T. B. King, the talented editor of the Wilmington Messenger, with a two column sketch of his life.

There was a very large attendance at Metropolitan Hall last night to witness "A Breezy Time." Every body was well pleased. The company will always meet a cordial welcome.

Residences for the accommodation of small families are still in demand in this city. This is a good chance for capitalists. It would seem to be better than eight per cent mortgages.

A boxing match took place at Stokes Hall in Durham last night between a Durham and Wake county man. We have not heard the result, but we are betting odds on our man all the same.

A colored man, named Holy Wilkins, was murdered near Enfield, last Saturday night, near the railroad. He stated, in his ante mortem examination that four negroes were his assailants, and that the crime was committed for robbery.

Thos. Hill, of Hillsboro, who was said to be a cousin of the Confederate Ben Hill, died last Saturday night in a cheap lodging house in New York. He sent for his wife to come to see him but died before she arrived.

The Chrysanthemum show opened this morning at the old stand of Moseley & McGee where the most delicious refreshments are being served. We hope our people will patronize it very liberally as the proceeds are for a charitable purpose.

It is but simple justice to our esteemed contemporary the Chronicle to state that the facilities offered to the public last night in the matter of announcing the dispatches are highly appreciated by our people. It was a piece of journalistic enterprise of which the proprietors may justly feel proud.

The heat of the local reporter for news such a day as this is truly an uphill business. There is absolutely nothing stirring, and one is met on all sides with the stereotyped inquiry "what is the election news?" This will however gradually wear off, and in a day or so things will run back in the old channel.

Escaped.

We learn that the colored man, Jim Burrows, who committed murder near Garner, last Monday, came to Raleigh the same day and placed his horse in one of the stables of this city. He tried to sell it, but was pressed so hard that he made his escape leaving the horse behind. We hear that the horse is still in charge of a party here.

Good Roads.

We have received a form of application to the Congress of the United States for the establishment of a road department at Washington, D. C., for the purpose of bettering our system of highways. It is a good idea, and we hope the movement may meet with much success. The improvement of our roads is a matter of paramount importance to all our people.

Practical Business.

The election is now a thing of the past. The people have rendered the verdict, whether it be for better or worse, and in accordance with the spirit of our institutions, we submit. For many months past but little else than politics has engaged public attention, and the practical affairs of life have been correspondingly damaged. Now let us return to the affairs of every day life. The material progress of our city needs attention. There is much to do to make us such a city as we would have a right to expect as the capital of the "Old North State." While we are, of course, comparatively prosperous, we still need more incentives in the matter of proper industries by which all our people can be employed to make livings for themselves and families. Now let us get down to work, each man in his sphere to build up our community. Let us give politics the "go by"—at least for two years to come.

The Confederate Monument.

We do not know exactly the status of the matter of erecting a monument in this city to the memory of the confederate dead, but we hope it may be in a fair way towards consummation. It is a subject that should appeal not only to the sympathy of our people towards the memory of the brave defenders of our homes, but it is one in which state pride should hold a large share. It is the common criticism throughout the country that North Carolina has been too backward in perpetuating the memory of her illustrious dead. Other states have far outstripped us in this matter, and we owe it to our posterity to arouse up to the occasion.

Now that the turmoils of politics have, at least, temporarily ceased, we should address ourselves to this and other meritorious matters. It was the intention, during our recent centennial celebration to have laid the corner stone of an appropriate monument in the capitol square. For what we must suppose to have been good and sufficient reasons, the ceremony was postponed. It has been said that one cause of the postponement was that no authority existed by which the monument could be erected in the capitol square. We do not know how this is, but if authority be wanting we most sincerely hope that steps will be taken to effect the passage of such a law by the coming general assembly, as will settle the difficulty. We have heard, however, that some prefer the erection of the monument on one of the public squares in Raleigh. This, of course, is a matter of choice, and we suppose will meet with no material objection. What we desire is that the memento shall be an accomplished fact. So far as the time is concerned we think it would be appropriate for the exercise to take place during the session of the legislature.

Can't our new opera house be ready for the next legislature. Gov. Holt has returned to the city from Alamance.

Dropped Dead.

A colored woman named Ferebee Bragg, aged 54, dropped dead between 11, and 12, o'clock today from hemorrhage. She was a nurse by occupation and resided at the corner of Edenton and Harrington streets.

The Weather Today.

For North Carolina: Rain, warmer. Local forecast for this vicinity: On Thursday: Rain, stationary temperature.

Local data for 24 hours ending 8 a. m. today: Maximum temperature, 70; minimum temperature 48; rainfall 0.18.
