

THE LAMENTED DEAD.

Great Outpouring of People Do Homage to the Confederate Chieftain

An agreeable surprise was in store for our people this morning as "the clouds rolled by," and the day dawned clear, beautiful, cool and bracing. In fact the weather is all that could be hoped for.

PREPARATIONS.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather on yesterday the noble ladies were fully equal to the occasion, and worked incessantly in the matter of properly draping the doors and rotunda of the capitol. The blending of white and black was done in a most artistic manner giving a solemnity to the surroundings suitable in all respects. Nothing apparent has been overlooked in the arrangement and carrying out the general program. Even the matter of telegraphic communication with the funeral train had been looked after, so that no hitch in the proceedings might occur if it were possible to prevent it. As the train rolled into the station.

THE TOLLING OF BELLS was the tocsin for the general closing of the stores and this part of the program was carried out fully. The route as mapped out by the program was strictly adhered to.

THE ESCORT OF HONOR was composed of Gen R F Hoke, Capt S A Ashe, Capt M W Page, Mr G M Allen, Dr W R Capehart and others whose names we failed to learn. These went up to Greensboro last evening returning with the remains this morning.

VISITING MILITARY.

This morning at 6:15 the Fayetteville Light Infantry arrived and marched directly to the armory of the Governor's Guard. They were heartily welcomed and are being well cared for.

A HITCH.

About 9 o'clock a rumor gained credence that the funeral train was two hours and forty minutes behind. This threw a damper over the crowd that had already assembled in the streets and on balconies. Coming to see they determined to "watch and wait."

THE ARRIVAL.

About 12 o'clock it was announced that the funeral train would be here at 1:20. This caused a general rush to the depot for the purpose of securing eligible positions. The funeral car had for some time been drawn up at the south entrance of the depot. The colored coachman of the deceased had charge of the reins. He was attired in a neat suit of black, Prince Albert coat. The arrival of the train was heralded by the tolling of bells, and as soon as possible the casket was transferred from the car to the funeral receptacle by the pall bearers under direction of the committee of reception.

THE MARCH

was then commenced in the following order:

- Order of procession, via Martin and Fayetteville streets to the Capitol;
- Platoon of Police: C D Heatt, Chief.
- Pythian Band.
- Governor's Guard, Military Escort.
- Funeral Car, Drawn by Six Horses, James Jones (formerly a Servant of Mr. Davis), Driver.
- Pall Bearers—J Wiley Jones, S W Walker, N S Moseley, J R Rogers, R H Bradley, J Q Hudson.
- J W Brown, Director.

FIFTH DIVISION.

Officers and ex-officers of the various departments of the state government: Walter Clark, Chief.

SIXTH DIVISION.

Mayor and city and county officials, Chamber of Commerce and citizens generally: J M Heck, Chief.

SEVENTH DIVISION.

The schools under the immediate charge of their Principals:

St. Mary's and Peace Institute. Agricultural College and Graded Schools

Morson and Denson's School. John B. Burwell and C. B. Denson, chiefs.

EIGHTH DIVISION.

Ladies' Memorial and Monumental Associations and ladies generally; E. Burke Haywood and C. M. Busbee, Chiefs.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Chants and Dirges by the Choir, Wm S Primrose, Director.

Prayer by Rev M M Marshall.

Marshals—Thomas S Kenan, Chief. Assistants—Peter E Hines, W H Hughes, R S Tucker, R H Brocks, R H Battle, T P Devereux, J J Thomas, V E Turner, M W Page, A B Stronach.

Both sides of the streets along the route were literally packed with people, while the windows and balconies presented a scene of men, women and children. In the capitol square the crowd was even larger than on the streets, if possible. Every available space was occupied. Hats were taken off and thousands stood uncovered in presence of the dead chieftain.

INCIDENTS.

A special train arrived from Durham just in rear of the funeral cars, containing a company and a large number of citizens.

The pupils of the different schools formed in a line at the south entrance of the capitol, and joined in the procession as it made the detour to the west gate.

Gov. Carr and staff received the procession at the south gate joining in and marching to the west gate where the remains were taken and carried to the rotunda. The Governor was dressed in a full suit of black. His staff were in full uniform. It had not been decided at this writing what time the train will leave for Richmond. As they can't reach that city before night, they may remain in Raleigh for four hours or more.

LATER.

At 3:25 the remains were taken to the station via the west gate and Hillsboro and Dawson streets.

We had a pleasant call from Rev J L Nash of Wilmington this morning. He is looking well and enjoying good health. He will preach at Brooklyn M E church tonight, commencing at 8 o'clock. The public are cordially invited to attend.

Has the co-incidence lately occurred to our readers that Lincoln was a Kentuckian, Davis was a Kentuckian, and Henry Clay, the great union compromiser, although a native of Virginia, hailed from Kentucky.

Fetter's Southern Magazine (Fetter & Bush Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky) contains a story in the June number entitled, "The Beast That Bought Me," by Mrs. A D Sayre, of Montgomery, Alabama.

It is much to be regretted that no minute guns were fired today as the procession moved. We should have cannon for such occasions. In other places we notice this part of the program was carried out.
